Important things to know about cancellation policies

When choosing a cancellation policy for your home, be sure that your selected cancellation policy complies with local rules and regulations.

“Full refund” refers to the price that you set for your listing including taxes. Refunds for Airbnb guest fees depend on several factors.

Cancellation and booking confirmation times are always based on the local time zone for the listing.

A 24-hour cancellation period applies to all standard cancellation policies for shorter stays (less than 28 nights). This allows guests to cancel for a full refund including taxes for up to 24 hours after the reservation is confirmed, as long as the reservation was confirmed at least 7 days before check-in.

Certain non-refundable hotel listings are exempt from the 24-hour free standard cancellation period.

Standard cancellation policies for shorter stays

Your standard cancellation policy applies to all reservations of 27 or fewer consecutive nights. All standard cancellation policies include a 24-hour cancellation period. This allows guests to cancel for a full refund, including taxes, for up to 24 hours after the reservation is confirmed, as long as the reservation was confirmed at least 7 days before check-in (based on the listing's local time).

Flexible Guests can cancel until 24 hours before check-in for a full refund including taxes, and you won't be paid. If they cancel after that, they'll receive a refund of pro-rated taxes, and you'll be paid for each night they stay, plus one additional night.

Guests can cancel until 24 hours before check-in for a full refund including taxes, and you won't be paid. If they cancel after that, they'll receive a refund of pro-rated taxes, and you'll be paid for each night they stay, plus one additional night.

Moderate Guests can cancel until 5 days before check-in for a full refund including taxes, and you won't be paid. If they cancel after that, they'll receive a refund of pro-rated taxes, and you'll be paid for each night they stay, plus one additional night, plus 50% for all unspent nights.

Offer guests a non-refundable option with a discount for shorter stays.

When you set your standard cancellation policy for stays of fewer than 28 nights, you can choose to offer a non-refundable option. The non-refundable option lets guests book at a discounted rate that's not subject to your standard cancellation policy. If they cancel, they won't be refunded. Keep in mind that the non-refundable option is still subject to the 24-hour cancellation period that applies to all bookings for shorter stays, with the exception of certain non-refundable hotel listings.

When your cancellation policy may be overridden for a guest refund

Your cancellation policy may be overridden in certain situations. Your guest may be able to cancel for a full or partial refund if:

The guest needs to cancel because of a Major Disruptive Event

The cancellation is due to an issue covered under our Refund and Rebooking Policy for Homes

If a host is paid for the reservation and their cancellation policy is overridden, Airbnb may recover any money owed by the host as provided in our Payments Terms of Service . Cancellation policies for home stays

For home reservations, cancellation policies are set by the host and vary by listing. If a host has selected a policy with a fully refundable option, you can cancel the reservation for free—just make sure you cancel before the time and date listed. Cancellation deadlines for receiving refunds are measured from the check-in time for the listing in its local time zone, or 3:00 PM if no check-in time is specified.

Keep in mind that some listings may be non-refundable, or only partially refundable, after certain dates and times. In these cases, you won't be able to cancel your reservation for free. In the rare circumstances that a large-scale event at your destination prevents completion of your reservation, you may be eligible for a refund under Airbnb's Major Disruptive Events Policy .

Guest cancellations and refunds

Sometimes plans change, and you want to cancel or alter your booking.

In general, if you cancel a reservation, the amount refunded to you is determined by the host's cancellation policy for your reservation.

If you're considering booking a stay, service, or experience, you can find the cancellation policy on the listing page.

Once you've booked, you can always review the cancellation policy on your Trips page or in the booking confirmation email.

In certain rare circumstances, you may be eligible for a refund regardless of the cancellation policy for the reservation. These include:

If you experience a problem with your reservation, such as a home, service, or experience that's significantly different than advertised, you may be eligible for a full or partial refund under our Rebooking and refund policy for homes or our Refund policy for services and experiences . To qualify, you'll need to contact us or your host within 72 hours of discovering the problem, and provide relevant evidence such as photographs or videos.

If your reservation location is impacted by a qualifying Major Disruptive Event , you may be eligible for a refund, regardless of the cancellation policy for the reservation. Keep in mind that the Major Disruptive Events Policy only applies to large-scale events that prevent or legally prohibit completion of a reservation, such as a government travel restriction or declared public health emergency at the listing location. If you believe the Major Disruptive Events Policy applies to your reservation, you can contact us to inquire about eligibility.

What happens if a host cancels before check-in

If a host cancels a reservation prior to check-in, their guest is entitled to a full refund, and where appropriate, Airbnb will help the guest find a similar place, depending on availability at comparable pricing.

Airbnb will generally convert the guest's original payment into a booking credit to facilitate immediate rebooking, but guests can always request a refund to their original payment method instead. If the booking credit is unused after 72 hours, the amount of the credit will be refunded to the guest's original payment method.

What happens if another Reservation Issue disrupts a stay

Guests must report Reservation Issues within 72 hours after discovery. If we determine that a Reservation Issue has disrupted a guest's stay we'll give the guest a full or partial refund, or help the guest find a similar place, depending on availability at comparable pricing. Rebooking assistance or the amount refunded depends on several factors including the severity of the Reservation Issue, the impact on the guest, the portion of the stay affected, whether the guest vacates the accommodations, other mitigating factors, and the strength of evidence provided of the Reservation Issue.

What Reservation Issues are covered

The term "Reservation Issue" refers to these situations:

Host cancels the reservation prior to check-in.

Host fails to provide their guest access to the accommodations.

Accommodations are not habitable at check-in, including but not limited to any of the following reasons:
Not reasonably clean and sanitary. Contain safety or health hazards.

Not reasonably clean and sanitary.

Contain safety or health hazards.

Accommodations are significantly different than advertised, including but not limited to any of the following reasons: Inaccurate space type (ex: entire place, private room, or shared room). Inaccurate type or number of rooms (ex: bedrooms, bathrooms, and kitchens). Inaccurate location of the accommodations. The Listing fails to disclose that the host, another person, or a pet will be present during the stay. Special amenity or feature advertised in the Listing is not present or does not function (ex: pool, hot tub, major appliance, heating, and air conditioning systems).

Inaccurate space type (ex: entire place, private room, or shared room).

Inaccurate location of the accommodations.

The Listing fails to disclose that the host, another person, or a pet will be present during the stay.

Special amenity or feature advertised in the Listing is not present or does not function (ex: pool, hot tub, major appliance, heating, and air conditioning systems).

How to request rebooking assistance or a refund

To request rebooking assistance or a refund, the guest who made the reservation must contact us or their host within 72 hours after discovery of the Reservation Issue. Requests should be supported by relevant evidence such as photographs, videos, or confirmation of the conditions by the host, which we will use to help determine whether a Reservation Issue has occurred.

How this Policy affects hosts

If a host cancels a reservation or another Reservation Issue disrupts a guest's stay, the host will receive no payout or will have their payout reduced by the amount refunded to their guest.

In most circumstances we will attempt to confirm a guest's reported concern with their host. Hosts can also dispute a guest's assertion of a Reservation Issue by contacting us .

Other things to be aware of

This Policy is applicable to the maximum extent permitted by law, which may imply guarantees that cannot be excluded. When this Policy applies, it controls and takes precedence over the reservation's cancellation policy. Before submitting a request to us, whenever feasible, the guest must notify the host and try to resolve the Reservation Issue directly with their host. In connection with resolving the issue, guests can request refunds directly from hosts using the Resolution Center . We may reduce the amount of any refund or adjust any rebooking assistance under this Policy to reflect any refund or other relief provided directly by a host. As part of providing rebooking assistance we may, but are not obligated to, pay for or contribute to the cost of new accommodations. We may also provide guests with the option of applying the value of a canceled reservation to new accommodations, or of receiving travel credit, in lieu of a cash refund.

If a guest demonstrates that timely reporting of a Reservation Issue was not feasible, we may allow for late reporting of the Reservation Issue under this Policy. Reservation Issues that are caused by the guest, co-travelers, or their invitees or pets are not covered by this Policy. Submitting a fraudulent request violates our Terms of Service and may result in account termination.

Our decisions under this Policy are binding, but do not affect other contractual or statutory rights that may be available. Any right that guests or hosts may have to initiate legal action remains unaffected.

This Policy is not insurance and no premium has been paid by any guest or host. All rights and obligations under this Policy are personal to the booking guest and host of the reservation and may not be transferred or assigned. Any changes to this Policy will be made in accordance with our Terms of Service . This Policy applies to homes, but does not apply to experience or service reservations.

In the rare circumstances that large-scale events prevent or legally prohibit completion of a reservation, the Major Disruptive Events Policy may apply.

Major Disruptive Events Policy

Overview

In general, cancellations and refunds for Airbnb reservations are governed by the listing's cancellation policy . In the rare circumstances that large-scale events prevent or legally prohibit completion of a reservation, the Major Disruptive Events Policy (the "Policy") may apply. When this Policy applies, guests can cancel their reservation and receive a refund, travel credit, and/or other consideration regardless of the reservation's cancellation policy , and hosts can cancel without fees or other adverse consequences , although their listing's calendar will be blocked for the dates of the canceled reservation.

This Policy applies to reservations for homes, services, and experiences. The Major Disruptive Events Policy is not an insurance policy.

What events are covered

The following events are covered under this Policy if they impact your reservation location, occur after the time of booking, and prevent or legally prohibit completion of a future or ongoing reservation (referred to in this Policy as "Events"):

Declared public health emergencies and epidemics. Government-declared epidemics, pandemics, and public health emergencies. This does not include diseases that are endemic (for example, the flu) or commonly associated with an area (for example, malaria in Thailand). COVID-19 is not covered under this Major Disruptive Events Policy.

Government travel restrictions. Mandatory travel restrictions imposed by a governmental agency, such as an evacuation order or shelter-in-place order. This does not include non-binding travel advisories and similar government guidance.

Military actions and other hostilities. Acts of war, hostilities, invasions, civil war, terrorism, explosions, bombings, rebellions, riots, and insurrection.

Large-scale outages of essential utilities. Prolonged outages of essential utilities, such as heat, water, and electricity, impacting the vast majority of homes in a given location.

Unforeseeable natural disasters and severe weather events. Unforeseeable natural disasters, like earthquakes and tsunamis, and unforeseeable severe weather events, like tornadoes. This does not include events that are foreseeable for a given location, as described further below.

What happens if a reservation is impacted by a covered Event

When a large-scale event occurs, we assess the situation to determine whether the Major Disruptive Events Policy applies. If it does, we activate the Policy for the impacted area and timeframe where we anticipate that the Event will prevent or legally prohibit completion of reservations. Reservations outside of the defined area and timeframe may not be eligible, though hosts may still be able to cancel without adverse consequences if they are unable to host. We continuously monitor these situations and adjust coverage as needed to reflect changing conditions. If you believe this Policy applies to your reservation, please contact us to inquire about eligibility.

What is not covered

We understand that other circumstances outside of your control may disrupt your plans. In any situations not listed above, your reservation remains subject to the host's cancellation policy for the listing.

Examples of common events not covered by this policy include:

Events that impact a guest or their ability to travel, but not the reservation location

Unexpected injury or illness

Government obligations like jury duty or court appearances

Non-binding travel advisories or other government guidance that fall short of a travel ban or prohibition

Cancellation or rescheduling of an event for which the reservation was made

Transportation disruptions such as airline insolvency, flight cancellations, transportation strikes, and road closures due to maintenance

Weather or natural conditions that are common enough to be foreseeable in a given location, such as hurricanes in Florida during hurricane season or winter weather in the northern hemisphere during winter months—unless the event triggers a covered Event that prevents completion of the reservation, such as government-issued mandatory travel restrictions

For reservations not covered by this Policy, we encourage guests and hosts to find a mutually acceptable arrangement, such as a full or partial refund or an alteration of the booking dates. Note that any refunds outside of the reservation's cancellation policy are at the host's discretion. Airbnb does not take part in or guarantee such refunds.

How this policy affects hosts

If a reservation is covered by the Major Disruptive Events Policy, hosts can cancel without fees or other adverse consequences. If a host cancels under this policy, their listing's calendar will be blocked for the dates of the canceled reservation. If a reservation is canceled under this Policy, the host does not receive a payout for the canceled dates of the reservation, or, if the payout has already been made, the refunded amount will be withheld from the next payout(s).

Regardless of whether a reservation is covered by this Policy, hosts can cancel for certain valid reasons, such as major damage to a listing, without fees or other adverse consequences. Hosts are obligated to cancel a reservation if their listing is uninhabitable or is inconsistent with what the guest booked. Failure to do so may result in listing suspension, cancellation of existing reservations, and refunds to guests until the listing is habitable and consistent with the listing description. This also violates our Ground rules for hosts , and can lead to consequences up to and including account removal.

Other things to be aware of

This Policy does not limit your rights under local regulations, and any decisions made by Airbnb under this Policy do not affect your statutory rights.

What to do if you accidentally made a booking or booked the wrong dates

If you made a mistake when you booked a home, service, or experience—maybe you hit reserve before you checked the details, or you got the right place, but the wrong dates—there are steps you can take to address it.

Check the cancellation policy for your reservation to find out if you'll receive a refund

Your host's cancellation policy determines if you're eligible for a refund if you need to cancel. Some bookings allow free cancellations if you act within a certain time frame, so your first step is to check the cancellation policy for your home, service, or experience reservation.

You can find info about your reservation in the message thread with your host, or by checking your Trips . The cancellation policy is located under Reservation details .

If you're within the free cancellation window, no problem. You can go ahead and cancel your reservation and make other plans.

Request a change to your home reservation

If you want to keep your home reservation but need different dates, you can send a trip change request to your host. The host decides whether to approve the change. If the dates you need aren't available, try messaging your host—they may be able to adjust their calendar or suggest alternatives.

Make changes to a service or experience reservation

If you booked a service or experience, but you made a mistake with the date or time, you may be able to change your reservation , depending on your host's availability and their cancellation policy .

Hotel changes or cancellations

If you're within the free cancellation window, you can cancel your reservation and rebook, so long as the hotel has availability.

If you're outside the free cancellation window, you can call the hotel directly to ask if they'll offer a refund so you can rebook. Or you can contact us , and we'll request a refund from the hotel on your behalf.

Please be aware that any changes or a refund may not be possible as they're strictly at the hotel's sole discretion. Tip: Calling your hotel can lead to a quicker response.

Learn more about how to make changes to your hotel reservation .

Reach out to your host directly

In situations where you're not eligible to cancel for a full refund, communicating directly with the host can often help. Explain the situation and ask if they can offer flexibility. Many hosts are understanding and may help with a refund or date change, especially if you reach out quickly.

Keep in mind: A refund outside of the cancellation policy for the reservation is always at the discretion of the host.

If you have a problem or issue during your reservation

You have 72 hours to report any issue to your host or to Airbnb from the time of discovery if you have any problems with your home, service, or experience reservation.

Document the issue and message your host

Here's how to prepare:

Document the issue : If possible, take photos or video to document the issue like a missing or broken amenity.

Message or speak to your host : Your host is your best point of contact to reach out to if anything comes up during your home, service, or experience reservation. It's likely that they'll be able to help you fix the issue. You can message your host directly to let them know what's going on.

Ask for a refund : If you need to request a refund because of the issue, there's a higher chance your host will accept your request if you can agree on an amount first. Send a request to your host for the refund in the Resolution Center and provide the details of the issue along with the photos or video.

Get help from Airbnb to resolve the issue

Though we always want hosts and guests to work things out directly if they can, we know it's not always possible. If your host is unable to resolve the issue, doesn't respond at all, or declines your refund request, just let us know, click or tap Get Help from the reservation page. Someone from our team will step in to help resolve the issue.

When we can help rebook home reservations

For home reservations: if we find it's an issue that's supported by AirCover for guests , we'll help you find a similar place, depending on availability at comparable pricing. If a similar place isn't available or you'd prefer not to rebook, we'll give you a full or partial refund.

Issues with your hotel stay

If there's an issue with your accommodation upon arrival or during your stay—like a missing amenity, a non-working item, or a general reservation problem—consider contacting the front desk directly, as you may get a quicker response.

Note: Depending on the hotel listing, when you complete your booking you may have a reservation for a type of room, rather than a specific room.

If there's an emergency situation or your safety is threatened

In an emergency situation or if your personal safety is threatened, contact local police or emergency services immediately. If you're unfamiliar with local emergency services phone numbers, you can use Airbnb to dial emergency services now .

For any other safety issues, you can always reach us through our dedicated 24-hour safety line. Contact us by phone, email, or chat to get priority access to specially trained safety agents.

If there's an issue related to home sharing in your community

For concerns related to home sharing in your community, contact our Neighborhood Support team.

If your home host cancels before check-in

If there's a problem and you can't get in touch with your host

If the listing is significantly different than advertised, and your host can't resolve the issue

Our team can help you find a similar place, considering location and amenities, based on availability at comparable pricing. If a similar place isn't available or you'd prefer not to rebook, we'll give you a full or partial refund, including service fees.

How AirCover for guests works

AirCover for guests provides support for serious issues with your home booking, for example:

Host cancels your reservation prior to check-in

The heating is not working in winter

The listing has fewer bedrooms than listed

It's a different type of home—a private room instead of an entire home

A major advertised amenity, such as a pool or kitchen, is missing

AirCover for guests doesn't include more minor inconveniences, like a broken toaster.

Resolving issues during your stay

Your host is your best point of contact to reach out to if anything comes up. You can message your host directly to let them know what's going on. If an issue does come up during your stay:

Document the issue : Take photos or videos as evidence.

Contact your host : Notify your host within 72 hours of discovery, describing the problem and seeking a resolution.

Contact us : If your host is unresponsive or unable to resolve the issue, contact us immediately.

AirCover for guests support : If the issue is covered by AirCover for guests and you wish to leave, we'll help you find comparable accommodation based on availability and pricing. If a similar place is unavailable or you prefer not to rebook, you'll receive a full or partial refund.

What is travel or stay protection insurance?

Travel is rewarding, but sometimes things don't go as expected. People can get sick, flights can get canceled, and bags can go missing. To help protect you financially, there's travel or stay protection insurance.

Airbnb guests who live in the United States, United Kingdom, certain Canadian provinces, Austria, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, and Spain can purchase travel insurance on the checkout page. The travel insurance policies are offered by Generali's Europ Assistance Group, trading under the Generali name in the US and Europ Assistance in the EU, UK and Canada. Learn more about what's covered .

Airbnb guests who live in Australia can purchase stay protection insurance on the checkout page. The stay protection policy is underwritten by Chubb. Learn more about what's covered .

Don't live in any of the above countries? Guests everywhere can purchase travel insurance outside of Airbnb, directly through a travel insurance company's website or by shopping around on a comparison site.

How AirCover for guests works with travel or stay protection insurance

Here's an example of how AirCover for guests and travel or stay protection insurance can work together.

You arrive at your destination and learn that the airline has sent your baggage to the wrong city and you won't get it back for at least 24 hours. You then check-in at the place to stay and find out that the number of bedrooms at the place are less than advertised.

In this situation, AirCover for guests can help you find a new place to stay, depending on availability at comparable pricing. If you purchased travel or stay protection insurance with your Airbnb reservation or booking, you can also file a claim with Generali, Europ Assistance, or Chubb to get reimbursed for certain extra things you have to buy while waiting for your baggage, like clothing and toiletries.

Note: Travel insurance sold in the US and Canada includes assistance services.

Host damage protection protects your place and belongings every time you host on Airbnb. Like any kind of protection program, it has a few terms, conditions, and exclusions . Host damage protection isn't an insurance policy, and not all damage is included within its terms—so we suggest you also purchase personal insurance for any property damage caused by guests that we don't protect. With host damage protection, Airbnb will reimburse you for certain damages caused by guests to your home and belongings if the guest does not pay for those damages. Host damage protection is also different from our host liability insurance—you'll learn more about that in the next section. Lastly, please note that all limits shown are in USD. Any conversion from USD to other currencies is calculated on the date the reimbursement request is paid.

Host liability insurance protects you in the unlikely event that you're found legally responsible for a guest being hurt or their property being damaged or stolen during an Airbnb stay at your place. It is underwritten by third party insurers and also comes with some terms, conditions, and exclusions, which you can learn more about in the comprehensive program summary . Please note that all limits shown are in USD. Any conversion from USD to other currencies is calculated on the date the claim is paid by the insurer.

Experiences & Services liability insurance protects you if you're found legally responsible for a guest being hurt or their property being damaged or stolen while you're hosting them during an Airbnb Experience or Service. This only applies to Experiences & Services, so hosts of stays aren't included in this coverage. You can learn about any specific terms, conditions, exclusions, and details of the third party insurers in the comprehensive program summary . Again, all amounts shown are in USD. Any conversion from USD to other currencies is calculated on the date the claim is paid by the insurer.

If you're a host of stays in Japan , or an Experience host in Japan , you have your own protection program, as the Host damage protection, Host liability insurance, and Experiences & Services liability insurance don't apply to you. Hosts who offer accommodations through Airbnb Travel, LLC and Adventures Hosts are also not covered by these programs.

For listings in Washington state, US, Airbnb's contractual obligations for host damage protection are covered by an insurance policy purchased by Airbnb, which does not change the contractual responsibilities of hosts and guests under the host damage protection Terms, Airbnb Terms of Service, or the Airbnb Payments of Service.

If you're hosting stays, Experiences or Services in the UK, the host liability insurance policy and the Experiences & Services liability insurance policy are underwritten by Zurich Insurance Company Ltd., and arranged and concluded at no additional cost for UK hosts by Airbnb UK Services Limited—an appointed representative of Aon UK Limited, which is authorized and regulated by the Financial Conduct Authority. Without prejudice to the authority of the host country where insurance distribution services are provided, the member state responsible for the supervision of Aon is the Kingdom of Spain and the Supervisory Authority, the General Directorate of Insurance and Pension Funds, at Paseo de la Castellana 44, 28046 – Madrid.

Guest identity verification, reservation screening and the 24-hour safety line are tools or features used by Airbnb to help verify guest identities, screen reservations for potential party and property damage risk, and provide access to Airbnb's 24-hour safety line. These features aren't insurance policies or guaranteed to prevent incidents. Guest identity verification is required for guests traveling to 35 countries . Government identification may not be collected in all cases—visit our Help Center for more information. Reservation screening using machine learning is designed to redirect reservations that may have a higher risk of being associated with a potential party and property damage. This feature is currently available in the US, Canada, and Australia, with the goal of expanding to global coverage (where feasible and legally permissible). Visit our Help Center for more information.

Host damage protection

Host damage protection, part of AirCover for Hosts , reimburses Hosts up to $3 million in the rare event your place or belongings are damaged by a guest during an Airbnb stay. You're reimbursed for certain damage caused by guests to your home and belongings if the guest does not pay for the damage. It also reimburses for extra cleaning services in certain cases, like removing stains left by guests (or their invitees) or pet accidents and smoke odor removal.

Start a reimbursement request

File for reimbursement for damage, missing items, or unexpected cleaning.

Get started

What's covered

Host damage protection covers you for:

Damage to your home, furnishings, valuables, or belongings caused by guests (or their invitees)

Damage to parked cars, boats, or other vehicles caused by guests (or their invitees)

Extra cleaning costs required to remove stains left by guests (or their invitees) or pet accidents, smoke odor removal, or when required due to additional unapproved guests

Income lost if you need to cancel confirmed Airbnb bookings due to damage caused by a guest (or their invitees)

When you offer an emergency place to stay through Airbnb.org, you're still covered by Host damage protection.

Host damage protection doesn't cover:

Damage from normal wear and tear

Loss of currency

Loss due to acts of nature (ex: earthquakes and hurricanes)

Injury or property damage to guests or others (those may be covered by Host liability insurance)

Cleaning associated with normal check-out tasks (ex: laundry, dishes, or trash removal)

Other limitations apply

The reimbursement process

Document the issue by taking photos or videos, getting repair or cleaning estimates, and/or receipt.

Within 14 days of the responsible guest's checkout, file a reimbursement request in the Resolution Center .

Your guest will have 24 hours to respond to the request. If they don't respond, pay partially, or decline payment, you'll be able to submit a reimbursement request under Host damage protection. Airbnb Support will then step in and review the request. (If the accommodation is in Washington state, our insurer will review the request.)

Keep in mind that if you want to involve Airbnb Support in your AirCover for Hosts request, you will need to do so and submit the supporting documentation of the damage within 14 days of the damage or loss.

How Host damage protection works with cleaning and pet fees

If you choose to include cleaning fees or a pet fee, please keep in mind that they are meant to cover expected costs.

Host damage protection, on the other hand, covers unexpected costs related to additional cleaning in certain situations or pet damage—for instance, removing smoke odor or replacing your sofa because a dog chewed it up.

To learn more about Host damage protection, go to the terms .

Disclaimer: Host damage protection isn't an insurance policy. It doesn't protect Hosts who offer stays in Japan, where Japan Host Insurance applies or Hosts who offer stays through Airbnb Travel LLC. Keep in mind that all coverage limits are shown in USD.

For listings in Washington state, Airbnb's contractual obligations under Host damage protection are covered by an insurance policy purchased by Airbnb. Host damage protection isn't related to Host liability insurance. Host damage protection is subject to terms, conditions, and limitations .

Host taxes and payouts

The information in this article applies to Host payouts. You can also find out how taxes and payouts work for Co-Host payouts .

As a Host receiving payouts on Airbnb, we may require your taxpayer information in order to comply with tax reporting and compliance obligations. Absent your tax information, in some cases, we may be required by government tax authorities to withhold taxes at specified default rates.

To ensure that your account is in compliance and to avoid any disruptions in receiving your payouts, or having your calendar blocked, please take a few minutes to add your taxpayer information today.

You can learn more about country income tax obligations by accessing the links in the sections below.

Here's where you can add and track information about taxes and payouts:

Taxes : Manage your taxpayer information and tax documents

Payments and payouts : Manage your payments, payout methods, and taxpayer assignments

Earnings dashboard : Find your paid payouts, upcoming payouts, and gross earnings

Withholding tax

If you received a request to submit your taxpayer information and haven't done so yet, we may have to withhold a percentage from your payouts to remit to the relevant tax authority. Tax withholding is applied on each reservation and against the listing owner.

In some instances, we may even need to block payouts until we receive your taxpayer information.

Add your taxpayer information today.

Countries with withholding tax

Airbnb may be required to withhold taxes from your payouts by the following countries:

United States: Income tax. Learn more about US taxpayer information .

India: Income tax. Learn more about withholding tax in India .

Italy: income tax. Learn more about withholding tax in Italy .

Kenya: Income tax. Learn more about withholding tax in Kenya .

Please note: In order to meet Airbnb's reporting and compliance obligations in different countries, we may request that you provide taxpayer information for more than one country. In this situation, you'll need to separately fill out a tax form for each respective country.

Finding your tax details

You can find the amount of tax withheld in your earnings dashboard and in your Reservation Details page. Where applicable, the total amount withheld will be included on the tax documents we issue, so you can account for them on your tax returns.

Finding withheld tax

When you're accessing your reservation Host payout, any withholding tax appears in the Deductions section. The amount is computed based on the total night room fees and the applicable rate. Rates vary by tax authority and any taxpayer information that you provide.

Note: The US income tax withheld line displays withholding against the listing owner only. If a Co-Host is subject to tax withholding, it will not appear on the Reservation Details page.

How tax collection and remittance by Airbnb works

Airbnb automatically collects and remits certain taxes on behalf of hosts who offer stays , experiences, and services . Hosts may need to manually collect and remit other applicable taxes on their stay or experience price.

Whether or not Airbnb automatically collects taxes, it doesn't change the total payout you receive as a host. You'll continue to receive your payout minus the applicable Airbnb service fees .

This article does not apply to hotels contracting with Airbnb Travel, LLC. Please review how tax collection works for hotels contracting with Airbnb Travel, LLC . Hotels who use HotelTonight's software to distribute rooms on Airbnb are contracting with Airbnb Travel, LLC. If you aren't sure which entity you are contracting with, please contact us .

Applicable taxes

Our system determines which taxes are applicable by the address you enter for your stay, experience, or service listing. Please check your listing's details to make sure your address is correct. Even if Airbnb automatically collects and pays certain taxes on your behalf, you may still be required to manually collect other taxes. For example, Airbnb may collect regional taxes but not local ones in some places. Also, Airbnb is not responsible for any tax collection errors due to typos.

Checking tax totals

You can find collected taxes listed in the gross earnings section of the transaction history on host accounts. All guest receipts include taxes as a separate line item.

Note: Not all taxes are shown in this section, because some features are still being updated.

Understanding other tax obligations

We recommend doing some research to make sure you understand and comply with any local tax rules and obligations that apply to your listing. Check with your local government or a tax professional for additional information about taxes that apply to your situation.

Note: Airbnb provides general information to hosts regarding taxes and informs hosts to educate themselves about and follow their local laws and regulations, as well as to inform their guests of the exact tax amount prior to booking.

Taxes for hosts

Whether you're a seasoned hospitality pro, or have just started hosting, it's important to understand how taxes work for you. As a host, depending on your location, you may be required to collect local taxes, Value Added Tax (VAT), or Goods and Services tax (GST) on your stay, experience, or service price from your guests.

Local taxes on stays, experiences, and services

In some locations, Airbnb may collect and remit certain taxes on your behalf. However, there may be other taxes you are responsible for. If you determine that you need to collect additional taxes, it's important that guests are informed of the exact tax amount prior to booking.

If Airbnb's automatic tax collection and remittance isn't available for certain taxes, you can collect taxes manually .

When VAT/GST may apply

Depending on your country of residence, you may need to account for VAT/GST on the offering you provide. We encourage you to consult a tax advisor in your jurisdiction for more insight or if you need assistance assessing VAT/GST on the services you provide.

Additionally, Airbnb is required to collect VAT/GST on its service fees in countries that tax electronically supplied services. See more information about how VAT works for stays , experiences, and services .

How tax payout and reporting works

Depending on the type of tax collected, it may be detailed differently in your tax report.

If you're eligible to collect custom taxes through our custom tax feature , those taxes are collected from the guest and sent to you as a separate pass through tax payout. You are responsible for submitting, paying, and reporting all custom taxes related to your bookings to the relevant tax authorities.

Your tax report will aggregate your custom taxes per reservation, pay them out together as one line item, and include reservation details like listing name and reservation code, as well as the total amount paid out. Your payout includes your nightly price, cleaning fee, and any other fees you're collecting for new bookings, minus the host service fee.

1099-K

Airbnb hosts or co-hosts who are US citizens or US tax residents with reservation, experiences, or services transactions

Greater than $20,000 in gross transactions and over 200 payment transactions in 2025

January 31 following the reportable calendar year

1099-MISC

Hosts or co-hosts who are US citizens or US tax residents and received other reportable income such as bonuses, awards, incentives, Airbnb settled resolutions, and other miscellaneous payments

$600 or more in aggregate during the calendar year

January 31 following the reportable calendar year

1099-NEC

Airbnb service providers including photographers, translators, and other service providers who are US citizens or US tax residents

$600 or more in aggregate during the calendar year

January 31 following the reportable calendar year

Form 1042-S

Non-US hosts who provided a W-8 form and received payments which are from US sources

$1 or more

March 15 following the reportable calendar year

Note: Beginning with the 2026 tax year, the reporting threshold for both Form 1099-MISC and Form 1099-NEC will increase to $2,000, from $600 in 2025. This change is mandated by the One Big Beautiful Bill Act. Following this increase, the threshold will be subject to further adjustments for inflation starting in 2027, based on subsequent regulatory guidance.

Form 1099-K

Form 1099-K reports gross payment transactions processed on your behalf by Airbnb. As a Third Party Settlement Organization (TPSO), Airbnb is required by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and state tax authorities to issue Form 1099-K to US citizen or US tax resident hosts who meet 1099-K reporting thresholds.

You can learn more about US tax reporting for hosts and US tax reporting for co-hosts . You can also check out our Tax FAQ .

Following the passage of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBBA) , the original Federal 1099-K reporting threshold has been permanently reinstated, meaning third-party settlement organizations, including Airbnb, are now only required to issue Form 1099-K if a user's total gross transactions exceed $20,000 AND they have more than 200 transactions in a calendar year. However, a user might still receive a Form 1099-K even if they do not meet this federal threshold if their state has a lower reporting requirement or if federal withholding taxes were already deducted and remitted to the IRS.

When Airbnb issues Form 1099-K

If you meet the US tax reporting requirements for a tax year, you should receive your tax form in the mail and/or find it available in the taxes section of your account by January 31 following the reportable calendar year.

Who is eligible to receive Form 1099-K

For calendar year 2025, you will be issued a Form 1099-K if you meet one or more of the following IRS federal reporting thresholds:

You have received greater than $20,000 in gross payouts and have more than 200 payment transactions in the calendar year 2025. If you have multiple Airbnb accounts using the same tax identification number, these transactions will be aggregated to determine if you meet reporting thresholds. You will, however, still be issued separate Form 1099-Ks for each account.

You had US taxes withheld from your payments.

Your resident state/district has a lower filing threshold for income taxes. Find the list of states/districts below.

The following states/districts have separate lower filing thresholds: Arkansas, District of Columbia, Illinois, New Jersey, Maryland, Massachusetts, Montana, Vermont, and Virginia. If you meet the state threshold but not the IRS Federal Threshold, the 1099-K will only be filed with your state. This list is subject to change.

Understanding your Form 1099-K

For hosts (listing owners)

Gross payment transactions: A 1099-K form reports gross payment transactions processed on your behalf through Airbnb's platform. The reported amounts represent gross reservation totals (including Airbnb taxes/Airbnb fees + any cleaning fees/pass through taxes, which you instructed us to collect and pay to you + any Co-host payouts, if applicable) and Resolution payments received from guests.

The amounts are reported before the deduction of Airbnb fees/commissions. The totals do not adjust for reservation alterations and cancellations which were made after guest check-in. Payouts shared with co-hosts through the Co-host payouts feature will not impact the amount which will be reported to the listing owner for tax information reporting purposes; the host's Form 1099-K will include the full gross reservation amount.

We recommend that you consult with a tax professional to understand how to report your 1099-K on your tax return and any deductions which may be available to you.

Example

$100/night x 5 nights

$500

Cleaning Fee

$90

Local Taxes/Fees (pass-through, etc.)

$10

= Total 1099-K Reported to Host

$600

Airbnb Fees

-$18

Co-host payouts

-$114.40

= Net Payout to host

$467.60

For co-hosts

Payment transactions: A 1099-K form reports payment transactions processed on your behalf through Airbnb's platform. The reported amounts represent the amount you received as specified by the listing owner. The totals do not adjust for reservation alterations and cancellations which were made after guest check-in. We recommend that you consult with a tax professional to understand how to report your 1099-K on your tax return and any deductions which may be available to you.

Federal income tax withholdings

If federal income tax has been withheld, the total amount withheld from you for the reportable calendar year will be reported on Box 4. We only withhold federal income taxes when we determine we are legally required to do so under applicable US tax rules. Common reasons we have to withhold federal incomes taxes are:

We did not have your US taxpayer identification at the time of payout; or

The IRS notifies us that the US tax ID number we reported for you does not match the IRS records and we determine that we have not received adequate corrective information from you.

Learn more about US Tax Withholdings .

Multiple Airbnb accounts with the same tax ID

If you have multiple Airbnb accounts using the same tax identification number, the gross transaction amounts and reservation totals are aggregated to determine if you meet the IRS federal and/or state reporting thresholds.

If you meet the reporting requirements after you aggregate all your account totals, you will be issued a Form 1099-K for each account you have. For example, if you have four accounts, you will receive four separate Form 1099-Ks.

Single Airbnb account with multiple taxpayers

Your Form 1099-K will be reported according to the tax form assigned to the respective payout method. Only one tax form can be associated with a single payout method. Reporting eligibility is determined by looking at each tax form and the respective tax identification number.

If a host has set up co-host payouts, the co-host(s) will add their taxpayer information and will receive their own Form 1099 from within their own Airbnb account.

How to Reconcile your Form 1099-K

Use your Earnings Summary and/or Transaction History in your account to help you reconcile your Form 1099-K.

Earnings Summary

Gross Earnings: This corresponds to Box 1a on your Form 1099-K. This includes amounts such as, the nightly rate, cleanings fees, taxes which are collected and passed to you (pass-through taxes), payouts to Co-hosts and resolutions, as applicable

Airbnb Service Fees: This represents the total fees deducted from your gross earnings

Adjustments column: This shows any adjustments to your payouts

Earnings dashboard

In the Earnings dashboard > Paid section > Show all paid , select the relevant time frame (ex: January 2025–December 2025), then Apply

Next, select Get report > Create report to download the .csv file

Open the CSV file and filter the Earnings Year column for the applicable tax year (example: 2025)

Under the Type column, uncheck Resolution Adjustment and Payout

The gross reportable income is the total of the Amount and Host Fee columns—and should correspond to Box 1a of your Form 1099-K

If there are any negative adjustments, you will need to exclude these as Form 1099-K reports on gross transactions before adjustments. Other columns, including Cleaning Fee/ Management Fee/Occupancy Taxes, are itemized amounts and, if reportable, are already included as part of the Amount figure. Occupancy taxes collected and remitted by Airbnb are not considered in your Gross Amount.

Note:

If you have also received a Form 1099-MISC form, the yearly earnings report and earnings dashboard will include these transactions.

Your Form 1099-K will be reported according to the tax form assigned to the respective payout method. Only one tax form can be associated with a single payout method.

Form 1099-MISC

Form 1099-MISC is a tax document Airbnb issues to US citizen/tax resident hosts or Co-hosts who receive other reportable income from Airbnb. Generally, this form will report promotional payments, bonuses, awards, incentives, and Airbnb settled resolution payments which are considered reportable payments and are not included on Form 1099-K and/or Form 1099-NEC.

Note: If your tax classification is a C or S Corporation (including LLC classified as a C or S Corporation) as indicated on your Form W-9, you may be exempt from receiving a Form 1099-MISC document.

Form 1099-NEC

Form 1099-NEC is a tax document Airbnb issues to US citizen/tax resident service providers, such as photographers, translators, and concierge, who are paid $600 or more (in aggregate) during the calendar year. The amounts on this form are reported gross of any Airbnb service fees (as applicable).

Note: If your tax classification is a C or S Corporation (including LLC classified as a C or S Corporation) as indicated on your Form W-9, you may be exempt from receiving a Form 1099-NEC document.

If you are not an Airbnb Host and you provide services for Airbnb but have been contracted by a third-party vendor, your tax document will be issued by that third-party vendor. The document type you receive from that third party will depend on their tax classification and reporting requirements.

Form 1042-S

Form 1042-S is a tax document Airbnb issues to non-US citizen/non-US tax resident Hosts who submitted a Form W-8 and receive earnings from Airbnb that are US sourced. Amounts reported on the Form 1042-S are reported at gross (before our commission/fees are deducted).

Where to access the tax documents issued to you

If a tax document was issued to you, you can get a copy of it in your Airbnb account .

Click on  icon next to your profile picture and select Account settings

On the Account settings page, select Taxes

Under the Taxpayers tab, select the > icon

The Tax documents tab shows a list of tax documents issued to you (up to 4 years)

Alternatively, you can find all tax documents at user account level:

Go to earnings dashboard

Select Taxes information > Tax documents

Note: Go to Tax documents to find a list of all tax documents issued to you over the last 4 years. Refer to the "Your 202X Tax Form(s) Is Ready!" email Airbnb sent, which would've referenced a Form 1099 if you are receiving one.

Resolving problems with tax documents

If you are having problems reconciling your transactions to your tax documents or if the name, tax identification number, or amount on your tax document is incorrect, check out our instructions for requesting a correction .

Note: We can only provide a revised form after we research the issue and confirm any potential errors.

Frequently asked questions about US taxes

We've put together some frequently asked questions in relation to US taxes. Even if you're a non-US individual, we may still need your tax information.

Please read this FAQ carefully. We recommend that you consult with a tax professional if you're uncertain about your tax status. Airbnb cannot provide you with any tax advice.

Following the passage of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBBA), the original Federal 1099-K reporting threshold has been permanently reinstated, meaning third-party settlement organizations, including Airbnb, are now only required to issue Form 1099-K if a user's total gross transactions exceed $20,000 AND they have more than 200 transactions in a calendar year. In addition, beginning with the 2026 tax year, the reporting threshold for both Form 1099-MISC and Form 1099-NEC will increase to $2,000, from $600 in 2025. This change is mandated by the One Big Beautiful Bill Act. 1. Why does Airbnb need my taxpayer information?

To ensure that Airbnb sends you a complete and correct year-end tax form for payouts, we need you to provide us with your taxpayer information.

You can easily do this by completing a form within your Airbnb account.

2. What happens if I don't provide any taxpayer information?

US tax rules require Airbnb to obtain taxpayer information from every individual who receives payouts for hosting, that is a US citizen or tax resident, based on our records of their US identification card, US address, US telephone number, or US activity.

We also require taxpayer information from those whose account profile suggests a connection to the United States through a US-based payout method.

Potential consequences

If you fall into any of these groups but don't provide us with taxpayer information, Airbnb may:

Freeze payments to you

Block your listing calendar (applicable to listing owners)

Withhold tax on payouts, and—as required under US tax laws— remit the withholding to the IRS

Learn more about US taxes for hosts and US taxes for co-hosts .

Tax withholding

At the end of the year, Airbnb will send you an IRS Form 1099 (Form 1042-S for non-US persons) showing any withheld amounts. Once a Form 1099 or 1042-S has been issued, you may need to file a US tax return with the IRS to claim any refund or credit for the taxes withheld.

Airbnb does not provide assistance with the refund process. The tax refund process can be complex and may require assistance from a tax professional.

Special comments for non-US hosts with US tax listings

Non-US hosts with US listings generally must file US tax returns with the IRS on income earned from US listing(s), but are not subject to a withholding tax if a valid Form W-8ECI is provided to Airbnb.

Non-US hosts with US listings who cannot provide a valid Form W-8ECI (e.g. because you do not file US tax returns) should provide a Form W-8BEN (or Form W-8BEN-E if an entity) to confirm that you are not subject to tax withholding.

Payouts to non-US hosts with US listings who do not provide a Form W-8ECI will generally be subject to a 30% withholding tax remitted to the IRS.

3. I am a non-US host with a US listing. What tax information do I need to provide?

The information you need to provide depends on how you address your US tax obligations. Under US tax laws, non-US hosts (non-US citizens or non-US tax residents) may need to file a US income tax return on income they earn from US properties.

You can address this obligation in one of two ways:

If you file a US tax return and report your income from US listings, usually you can provide Airbnb with a Form W-8ECI. If you provide a valid W-8ECI, Airbnb will not withhold tax on your payouts, but will issue you with an IRS Form 1042-S annually reporting your payouts for you to report on your US tax return.

Alternatively, if you provide an IRS Form W-8BEN/-E, Airbnb will withhold 30% on your payouts from US listings and remit the tax to the IRS. At the end of the year, Airbnb will send you an IRS Form 1042-S showing the amount of withholding tax credits on your payouts.

For more information, please refer to the IRS guidance .

4. I'm not a US citizen or resident. Do I add my taxpayer information?

Yes. You should add your taxpayer information, even just to confirm that you should not receive year-end US tax information reporting. This is true even if you do not have listings in the US or host in the US.

If you don't host in the US and you don't receive payouts from US listing(s), adding your taxpayer information actively identifies you as a non-US individual and excludes you from US tax information reporting, and from blocks to your calendar (applicable to listing owners) or pauses to your payouts due to Airbnb not having this information.

US tax law

In certain situations, US tax law requires Airbnb to presume an individual who's hosting is a US individual if Airbnb does not have adequate information to conclude otherwise. For example, if payouts are requested to a US bank account. Learn more about US tax reporting for hosts and US tax reporting for co-hosts .

5. How do I change my taxpayer information?

Instructions on how to change your taxpayer information can be found here .

You can correct your taxpayer information by editing and re-submitting the prior tax form you provided to us through your Airbnb account, or by completing a new Form W-9.

Basic troubleshooting

Typical errors in taxpayer information include:

The name provided on the "Full name" line doesn't correspond to the tax identification number provided

The name provided is abbreviated and doesn't match the full legal name on record with the IRS

The tax identification number is incorrect

6. What forms are used for tax reporting - and who uses them?

There are four tax forms used for year-end tax reporting:

1. 1099-K: US citizen or US tax resident that meets one or more of the following criteria:

Beginning tax year 2025, if you've received more than $20,000 in total earnings and had more than 200 payment transactions in a calendar year.

You had US taxes withheld from your payments, or

Your resident state has a lower reporting threshold

2. 1099-MISC or 3. 1099-NEC: US citizen or US tax resident receiving at least $600 in other reportable income from Airbnb. Generally, this form will report any promotional payments, bonuses, awards, and miscellaneous payments considered reportable income and which are not included on Form 1099-K.

4. 1042-S eligibility: US citizen or US tax resident and you received income from US listings or experiences.

7. My listing is not located in the US, which form should I fill in?

Regardless of where their listing is located, all hosts who are US citizens or US tax residents (e.g. "US hosts") should complete a Form W-9

Individual non-US hosts can complete a Form W-8BEN to indicate they should not receive a Form 1099.

Non-US hosts who are not individuals should complete Form W-BEN-E. (Please note that for Form 1099-K purposes, Airbnb is able to accept a W-8BEN-E from foreign entities that are passthrough entities for US tax purposes.)

All forms are available here .

8. Why am I receiving notifications after providing my taxpayer information?

If you have already submitted your taxpayer information you should find the form under the Taxes section of your Account. There may be a few days' delay from when you submitted your tax form to when we initiate our communications and in-product notifications.

Depending on the tax form you submitted, we may need to run a validation check against IRS records to confirm the information or make sure the forms are completed properly. This helps catch any validation errors before we issue your year-end tax form. If we are notified of any discrepancies, we'll contact you by email.

9. Whose taxpayer information should I provide when there are payouts to multiple people?

If you have payouts with different beneficiaries, the taxpayer information (Forms W-9/W-8) provided should correspond to the person (including a legal entity) to whom you expect Airbnb to issue a US tax information Form (1099/1042-S) to report earnings. Only one tax form can be assigned to a single payout method. If you have more than one payout method going to different beneficiaries, you will need to add a tax form for each beneficiary.

If you don't know who should receive a 1099/1042-S for earnings, you may need to consult a tax advisor.

10. What name appears on tax document 1099/1042-S?

The US tax information reporting form will be issued according to the taxpayer information provided and how they are assigned to each payout method.

If you have only one taxpayer information form and multiple payouts, we will assign that tax form to all the payout methods. This will result in one Form 1099/1042-S issued for all the included payouts.

If you need more than one Form 1099/1042-S form issued to separate taxpayers, you will need to add multiple taxpayer information forms and then assign them to the respective payout methods. This can be done in your Account under Payout settings.

Instructions to add and allocate taxpayer information can be found in our Changing Taxpayer Information article.

If you have already been issued a Form 1099 or Form 1042-S and need a correction, read the article on US Tax Form (1099/1042-S) Corrections .

11. What do I do if I receive a TIN validation error email from Airbnb?

It's important to note that you may receive a TIN Mismatch notification and/or "B Notice" from Airbnb if you provide incorrect taxpayer information. If these notifications aren't responded to promptly, we may block your payouts or be required under US tax rules to withhold tax from payouts to you. For more information about potential penalties, refer to page 2 of the IRS Form W-9 instructions .

Need more help?

Visit the Help Centre for additional information about how to select the correct tax form and other common taxpayer information errors , or to learn more about the TIN mismatch notification.

12. Why are US taxes withheld for foreign hosts?

Under US tax law, income earned from real property (such as an Airbnb listing) in the US is subject to US tax reporting even when it's earned by non-US tax residents.

Accordingly, Airbnb requires every host with US listing(s) to provide Form W-9/Form W-8. If you're a non-US tax resident with US listing(s) and you also pay taxes on your US listing(s) in your home country, you should consult a tax advisor about whether you can offset any of your taxes with credits for taxes paid to other countries.

Key points

There are also key points you should pay attention to from a US tax perspective:

Any host with (a) US listing(s) who provides Airbnb Form W-8BEN (for individuals) or Form W-8BEN-E (for entities) will be subject to 30% US withholding tax on payouts on their US listing(s).

As an alternative to providing Form W-8BEN, certain non-US tax resident hosts with (a) US listing(s) can provide Form W-8ECI.

If you provide a valid Form W-8ECI, Airbnb won't apply US withholding tax to your payouts. However, providing Form W-8ECI is your certification that you consider payouts on your US listing(s) income

'effectively connected with a US trade or business' and that you will file a US tax return.

For more information, read the IRS' guidance on real property located in the US .

13. Why has my payout been suspended?

If we require your taxpayer information, you'll receive email and in-product notifications requesting the relevant information. If you do not respond to these notifications, your payouts may be suspended and/or your booking calendar may be blocked which will prevent you from accepting new reservations.

Once you have submitted the necessary information, any payouts due to you will automatically be released.

For further information see our Payment Terms of Service , which reflect that we have the ability to pause payouts if you do not provide the requested information. If you disagree with the Payment Terms, you may terminate your agreement with Airbnb at any time by deleting your account.

For all other payout suspension issues, please contact us .

14. Why do I need to recertify my Form W-8ECI?

Form W-8ECI is generally valid for a period starting on the date the form is signed and ending on the last day of the third succeeding calendar year. If your form is expired, we are obligated to withhold US non-resident alien tax at 30% from your US listings/experiences.

We request that you recertify your originally submitted information on the Form W-8ECI by launching the recertification process banner located on the top of your Taxes account page . You will be asked to review your previously submitted information, make any necessary address updates, and sign to certify that your tax status and information is correct.

For more information please visit our help center article on Form W-8ECI Recertification .

Leaving a review for a home or a guest

Who can leave a review and when

After a guest checks out, both the guest and their host will be prompted to leave a review . Both parties will have 14 days after checkout to submit their review. Reviews are only posted after both parties have submitted their reviews, or once the 14-day period has ended—whichever comes first.

Note: Find out how reviews work for a group of guests .

If a reservation is canceled

If a reservation is canceled before the day of check-in, neither the host nor the guest will be able to leave a review about that reservation. Find out more about what happens if a host cancels a reservation .

Guests and hosts can leave a review for certain reservations that are canceled on or after the day of check-in (12:00 AM in the listing's time zone).

Who can read reviews

Anyone can read public reviews and overall star ratings once they're published. Individual subcategory star ratings and notes to the host are available only to the host and Airbnb. Airbnb may use any information from reviews to help hosts improve their listings , to help identify guests' most-loved homes using Guest favorites and highlights , to impact search results , and to improve Airbnb.

Note: For more info on the impact of reviews as a host, check out ground rules for home hosts .

How listing and host ratings are calculated

Listing ratings

A listing's rating is the average of the overall rating scores from all reviews of the listing. Once a home receives at least three reviews, the listing's rating will appear next to the listing title in search results and on the listing page.

Host ratings

A host's rating is the average of the overall rating scores from all reviews of that host's listings. A host's rating is shown on the host's profile page alongside the written reviews. Learn more about ratings for homes .

For co-hosts, guest ratings and reviews won't appear on their public profile, be included in their host rating, or affect their Superhost status. However, when co-hosts are viewed within the Co-Host Network, the host rating shown incorporates ratings from reservations they've managed as a host or co-host when the following permissions were in place on the check-in date: full access, messaging and calendar access, or team owner.

Note: Reviews that have been removed by Airbnb are excluded from the calculation of both listing and host ratings.

After reviews are published

Finding your reviews

Once you're signed in to your Airbnb account, you'll be able to find both reviews you've written and reviews written about you on your public profile.

If a reservation has more than one confirmed guest, the host's review for the group will appear on the profiles of all the other confirmed guests who have Airbnb accounts and joined the reservation.

Note: Airbnb doesn't moderate reviews before they're published. However, reviews do need to relate to an authentic reservation, and may be removed if they violate our policy on authentic and trustworthy reviews . Find out more about editing or removing reviews .

Responding to a review

You can post a public response to a published review that someone has left for you as long as you follow our policy on authentic and trustworthy reviews .

Review display, search, and sorting

Reviews that are most relevant to you are shown first by default. You can also search reviews using keywords (example: cleanliness, internet speed, location, etc.) and sort reviews by recency, highest rating, or lowest rating. When review tags are selected, supporting reviews that mention those topics will be displayed and sorted by recency. On some listings, review highlights will also appear when a tag is selected. These summaries are based on details guests have written in their reviews and are generated automatically. Find more info about how reviews are displayed and how to sort them .

Guest details

To learn more about the guests who stayed at the home before, you can find information about the reviewers, such as their:

City, country, continent or region

Date of stay (example: Jun 2024, 3 weeks ago, today, etc.)

Trip type (example: stayed with kids, a group, or pets)

Length of stay (example: stayed one night, a few nights, about a week, or over a week)

Note: This information is based on public information on the reviewer's profile page or other information the reviewer submitted to sign up for Airbnb or complete their booking. To hide your information, opt out here .

Guest favorites and highlights

Guest favorites and highlights identify the homes that are the most loved by guests. Listings must have at least 5 reviews in the last 4 years with 1 review in the last 2 years to be eligible for a Guest favorite label, a top homes highlight, or a percentile ranking label. Learn more about Guest favorites and highlights .

You can remove a review you've written up to 30 days from the date it's published. If it's a review you received and you believe it doesn't follow our Reviews Policy you can ask us for help at any time.

Remove a review you've written

If you've written a review, you have up to 30 days from the date it's published to remove it from the Airbnb platform.

Remove a review you've written on desktop

Click Profile

Click Show reviews I've written

Go to the review you'd like to remove

Click Remove Review and follow prompts to complete removal. If the Remove Review button isn't available, the 30 day removal window has passed.

Remove a review you received

If a host or guest left you a review and you believe it doesn't follow our Reviews Policy, you can ask us to review it for removal at any time.

Who can ask to have a review removed

A review written about you or your listing will only be displayed on your profile or listing and eligible for you to dispute only if you are:

The listing owner

A full access co-host of the listing

A broad permissions pro-host, or member of the hosting team in managed accounts or pro-host accounts

A team owner

Part of "team guest management"

The guest who booked the reservation

To request removal of a review you received

Provide details about why you want the review removed

Upload any supporting documentation

Click Submit

Tip: When searching for a review to remove, use words included in the review. Searching for the reviewer's name or other details may not work.

What happens next

We'll review your request and email you our decision, usually within 48 hours. If the review complies with our Reviews Policy , it will stay on the Airbnb platform. If it doesn't comply, we'll remove it and notify the reviewer by email, explaining why. They'll also have the option to contact us if they believe there's been a mistake. If they provide new information that changes our decision, we'll update you.

If you can't submit a review removal request for a review you've received

Pending removal review: If you try to make a review removal request but can't, you or another eligible person may have already made a request that is still pending.

Limit of 2 removal requests: You can only submit a removal request for the same review up to two times. After submission, you may need to check again after 48 hours to find out if a decision has been made.

Airbnb's Reviews Policy

Reviews for homes , services , and experiences help our community make informed booking and hosting decisions and provide helpful feedback to guests and hosts. That's why reviews must be relevant, authentic, trustworthy, and follow our Content Policy .

What we don't allow

There are certain circumstances where reviews are unhelpful or untrustworthy and may be removed if they violate our policy. If a host or guest believes a review violates our policy, they can file a review dispute to have it considered for removal.

Reviews that are irrelevant

Reviews should be about the offering reviewed. For example, if a review for a home is about a separate service or experience provided by the same host rather than the home, it isn't relevant to future guests deciding whether to book the home.

Reviews are irrelevant if they don't provide the participants' first-hand experience about the reservation.

If a guest never arrived for their reservation or chose to cancel due to circumstances unrelated to the offering they booked, their review will be considered irrelevant because it isn't based on first-hand experience of the offering.

Reviews that are fake

Reviews are fake if they aren't based on a real reservation. Reviews must be submitted by or on behalf of someone who participated in the reservation.

Reviews involving bias, deception, extortion, incentivization, or pressure

Reviews may not be used to mislead or deceive Airbnb or another person.

Hosts and guests may not coordinate with, manipulate, extort, incentivize, or pressure another person to influence a review or exploit the review system.

Hosts and guests may not threaten a negative review as a means to obtain unwarranted compensation, refund, or other incentive.

Reviews may not be provided or withheld in exchange for something of value—like a discount, refund, or a reciprocal positive review—or a promise not to take negative action against the reviewer.

Reviews used to harm competition

Hosts and guests may not leave reviews of listings with which they are directly affiliated or in direct competition.

Reviews that are retaliatory

Airbnb users may not write reviews to retaliate against another user for enforcing an Airbnb policy.

A review will only be considered retaliatory if the reviewer committed a policy violation, was notified of that violation, and then left a biased review because their own violation was reported. A review discussing the facts or legitimacy of a Resolution Center or AirCover claim isn't automatically considered retaliatory.

Reviews that violate our Content Policy

Reviews must follow our Content Policy . For example, reviews may not contain explicit, discriminatory, harmful, or illegal content.

Enforcing this policy

If a review violates this policy, we may remove that review, including any associated ratings and other content. Depending on the violation, we may also restrict, suspend, or remove the associated Airbnb listing or account.

This policy may be applied differently in different places to reflect what local law requires.

Common examples of what doesn't qualify for removal

Airbnb's policy is informed by consumer laws that apply to online reviews. Reviews may only be removed from our platform in limited circumstances.

Common examples that don't qualify for removal include:

Disagreement with a star rating : A review won't be removed solely due to disagreement or dissatisfaction with the star rating—for example, a review says “Nice home and great stay,” but the guest left a 3-star rating.

Review mentions factors outside of the host's control : A review that mentions factors outside of a host's control doesn't necessarily violate our policy as the information may be relevant to future guests (ex: the neighborhood is noisy) and we assess the entirety of a review for relevancy.

Subjective opinions in written reviews : Many reviews contain subjective opinions about the reservation (ex: “The kitchen was small and cramped”). While the host may believe that the kitchen is spacious, the guest's perspective may provide helpful information to future guests.

Reporting reviews under this policy

To report a review for violating this policy, contact us and a member of our team will review your request.

Responding to reviews

While we expect all community members to post genuine reviews, we generally don't mediate disputes concerning review accuracy. Instead, users can post responses to reviews that comply with this policy.

Removing a review you've written

You can remove a review you've written up to 30 days from the date it's published.

To help maintain a positive environment for all members of our community, we prohibit certain content on Airbnb's platform. Content includes any written, photographic, audio, video, or other content, including any content generated or edited using AI. Examples include:

Writing : Listing titles and descriptions, profile pages, public and private reviews, feedback, Community Center posts, and messages to Airbnb, hosts, or guests

Imagery : Photos and videos, as well as imagery depicted within photos and videos (such as posters or art hanging on a wall in a listing)

The following content is not allowed on Airbnb:

Content, including superimposed company logos, links, or company names, created for the sole purpose of advertising a separate business or other commercial entity unrelated to the listing

Spam, unwanted contact, or content that is shared repeatedly in a disruptive manner

Content that is illegal, or endorses or promotes illegal or harmful activity

Content that is sexually explicit (including explicit nudity, sexual activity, or sexually explicit language intended for sexual arousal or referencing sexual acts)

Content that is violent, graphic, threatening, demeaning, insulting or harassing

Content that violates our Nondiscrimination Policy

Content that attempts to impersonate another person, account, or entity, including a representative of Airbnb

Content that violates another person's or entity's rights, including intellectual property rights, privacy rights, or violations of our Copyright Policy

Content that publicly discloses another person's private information, including content that is sufficient to identify a listing's location

Holding users to this policy

Users are responsible for their content. We reserve the right to remove any content, in whole or part, that violates this policy, our Terms of Service or any of our other policies , including our Reviews Policy , in accordance with our Terms of Service. In the event of repeated or severe violations, we may also restrict, suspend, or remove the associated Airbnb listing or account.

Your reviews from hosts

Reviews are a great way for hosts to give you feedback after your trip ends. Reviews also help our wider host community understand what to expect based on previous reviews of cleanliness, house rules, and communication .

Here's a breakdown of what's included when you get a review, and what a host may be able to read when you request or book a stay in the future.

Ratings from your host

As part of the optional review process, hosts may rate you with 1 to 5 stars on three categories: cleanliness, house rules, and communication. Similarly to star ratings for hosts , these category ratings are then combined into an averaged rating for the stay.

Your detailed ratings for past stays, as well as your overall category and averaged ratings across stays, can only be read by hosts when you request or book a stay with them in the future. Categories with positive ratings (4-5) will be displayed with a check mark and negative ratings (1-3) with a warning icon.

Ratings are used in a number of ways, and help:

Current or prospective hosts decide whether to accept a booking request from a guest;

Airbnb determine if a guest meets a host's requirements to Instant Book;

Airbnb determine whether a guest qualifies as an experienced guest eligible to book certain listings;
and

Airbnb determines whether a guest is following our ground rules for guests. Repeated or severe violations reported through ratings or to customer support can lead to warnings, suspension, and/or removal from the platform.

Public review from your host

While reviews are optional, when hosts choose to submit a review they're required to leave you a public review. The host's review is displayed on your profile , so anyone who clicks or taps on your profile can read it.

What you did well

Hosts have the option to highlight what you did well (ex: kept the place neat and tidy and in good condition, took care of garbage, sent helpful messages, was respectful, always responded, etc.). If you request or book a stay with a host, they can check what other hosts have highlighted about your previous stays. Positive feedback will be displayed next to a check mark.

Things to keep in mind for next time

If a Host submits a low rating in any category, we ask them to share what didn't go well on your trip. Using this feedback, Airbnb will then suggest ways to avoid issues on your next trip. If you request or book a stay with a Host, they can check this feedback about your previous stays. Negative feedback will be displayed next to a warning icon.

Notes from your host

You may get a note directly from your host with more feedback. When responding, keep in mind that only you and Airbnb can read this note.

Note: Feedback from your host can be found with your reviews but only on desktop or mobile web. It's not available in the app.

Help secure your account

We're always working to keep your account secure; here's how you can help protect your information as well.

Account security

Start with a solid password : Your Airbnb password should be unique—preferably completely different from any other account, such as your email, social media, or your bank. This helps ensure that if one account is compromised, it's less likely to impact others. Learn how to update your password or create a strong password .

Review your account: Check your account if you think someone has logged in to Airbnb without your permission.

If it seems suspicious, flag it: If you think something is off about an Airbnb listing, profile, or message thread, flag it for review. You'll be helping keep the Airbnb community safe. You can also report fake/lookalike websites designed to scam users.

Online security

Check for the "https": If it's included at the start of a URL, your connection is encrypted, which protects the integrity and confidentiality of your data. Some browsers may also show a lock icon next to the URL so you know it's secure. Type <https://www.airbnb.com> directly into your browser to get started. Or, if you click a link in an email, check the destination URL before you log in.

Stay up to date: Check for software updates that protect you from security risks.

Install a trusted antivirus: Get help detecting, removing, and preventing common viruses, along with other types of cyber attacks.

Check the sender: Don't click links or download attachments from an email unless you know who sent it.

Additional security features

Understand multi-factor authentication : If you log into Airbnb from a new place or device—or edit sensitive account information—you could be asked to confirm it's really you. You may need to enter a security code sent to your phone or email, or verify some of your account details. You might also get an account alert in case someone is trying to access your account.

Always go through us : Keep all payments and communication on the Airbnb platform . If a payment occurs off-platform, it's much more difficult for us to help if something goes wrong. Don't transfer funds outside Airbnb or share your email address before a booking is accepted. If someone emails you asking you to pay or accept payment offsite, contact Airbnb right away. Add and use two-factor authentication

To access certain parts of your account, you might be required to complete two-factor authentication. In addition to providing an extra layer of security, this measure is required for all Hosts in the European Economic Area (EEA). Two-factor authentication adds an extra layer of security to your account by requiring your phone to access your account.

Why two-factor authentication is required

Two-factor authentication is our name for Strong Customer Authentication , or SCA , which is a requirement of European payment service regulation. It's designed to help prevent fraud. You may have noticed a similar experience when accessing your bank account online or while using financial apps.

What you'll need to complete two-factor authentication

Before you get started, make sure you have a current phone number saved to the Personal info section of your account. This phone number will need to be capable of receiving a verification code via SMS text or phone call. If you don't have a phone number with these capabilities attached to your account, access to certain parts of your account may be blocked.

Set up two-factor authentication

Set up two-factor authentication on desktop

Click Menu > Account settings > Login & security

From the Set up two-factor authentication banner at the top of the page, click Set up now

Choose how you'd like to receive your one-time passcode—via text (SMS) or a phone call—and enter it when prompted

Create a personal identification number (PIN)

Add security questions

Using two-factor authentication once it's set up

When you visit a part of the Airbnb site or app that requires two-factor authentication, a one-time passcode will be sent to the phone number associated with your account. Enter the code you've been sent, and then confirm your identity using either your account PIN or your security questions.

Using Device Authentication

After two-factor authentication is set up, you may be able to authenticate your login in the same way you unlock your device, whether that's with face recognition, your fingerprint, or passcode. Check with your device manufacturer for specific instructions on how to set this up.

You can always deactivate this setting by visiting Login & Security on your account.

Keep in mind that if you're logging in from a new device for the first time, this feature won't be available. You'll need to use a verification code and PIN instead.

Making changes to your phone number

If you need to change the phone number you use for two-factor authentication, you can edit your phone number at any time. You will need to use two-factor authentication before adding or updating your phone number.

If you don't have access to any of the phone numbers on your account and can't receive a one-time passcode, select the Need Help option on the two-factor authentication screen. Once you've submitted your request, we'll get in touch within 12–24 hours so you can add a new phone number to your account.

What to do if you forget your two-factor authentication PIN

If you can't remember your PIN, you can answer your security questions to regain access to your account by clicking Forgot PIN on the Enter your PIN screen.

If you can't remember your PIN or security questions, select Need Help . Be ready to update your PIN as soon as you get a response from us, which will be within 12–24 hours.

Verifying your identity on Airbnb

At Airbnb, trust is the cornerstone of our community—where millions of people across the world place trust in each other as they travel or host services, experiences, or homes.

Building trust with each other

A key part of building this trust is verifying the identity of our users. Our identity verification process is a series of steps we take to help ensure users within our community are genuine so that everyone can feel more confident using Airbnb. Every host, new co-host, and booking guest must be identity verified to use our platform.

While no process is perfect, this aims to minimize fraudulent behavior, promote safety, and enable meaningful, real world interactions within our community.

Note: Our identity verification process checks a person's information against trusted third-party sources or a government ID. The process has safeguards, but doesn't guarantee that someone is who they say they are.

Why we verify identity

Verifying the identity of guests and hosts helps us to:

Promote trust between guests and hosts

Uphold Airbnb's community guidelines

Reduce fraudulent behavior

Perform background checks when permitted by law

Respond to, support and investigate safety and security issues

Comply with applicable laws and regulations, including payments and tax laws

How identity verification works

We require primary hosts, new co-hosts, and booking guests to complete identity verification for all stays, services, and experiences on Airbnb.

Verifying your identity means verifying certain personal information, such as your legal name, address, phone number or other contact details using trusted third-party sources or your government ID. In some cases, we can do this without any additional info needed from you. In other cases, we may need to ask for more information, as described below.

Some users may be able to choose to use facial recognition technology—also known as facial recognition — as part of completing identity verification. Verification using an NFC chip is also available in some countries.

Identity verification methods may also differ across regions. For example, South Korean and Indian users may also verify information through third-party partners for identity verification.

Don't worry—any identity information you provide to verify your identity won't be shared with any hosts or guests on Airbnb, and will be handled according to our Privacy Policy .

What info we ask for

Legal name, address, and/or other personal information: In some cases, personal info is all we need to verify your identity—but this depends on a few factors, including the country you're located in or if we detect anomalies on our platform. We'll collect your legal name during sign up or verification, but you can always add a preferred first name that shows to hosts and guests.

Photo of your government ID: If we can't verify you with the information above, or if a certain verification method isn't available or effective in your country, we may ask you to provide a photo of your government ID. This could be a driving license, passport or national identity card. You can learn more about the types of IDs permitted—as well as country-specific guidelines.

Selfie: We may need to ask you for a photo of yourself in addition to the above photo of your government ID. This selfie won't be used on your profile or shown to other users. If you can't provide a selfie that matches your government ID, you can contact us for an alternative verification method.

If you're not able to be verified with this information, in limited circumstances, you may be eligible to provide other proof of who you are, like a marriage license or court order, to complete this process.

Note: Hosts may be asked to verify additional information , such as your home address or citizenship, and other details, if they're hosting as a business . Additionally, if you are an EU resident and receive income from renting accommodations, providing experiences, or acting as a co-host—or if income is received from a listing in the EU—you'll also be asked to verify additional taxpayer information . If you are a Brazilian resident, you'll also be asked to verify additional taxpayer information to comply with Brazilian tax regulations.

When we ask to verify

Guests

As a guest, you'll need to verify your identity when you book a stay, service, or experience. Most users only need to do this once, and we'll guide you through any steps you'll need to take.

This typically happens during checkout—where we provide you with a specific deadline to finish. During this time, your reservation is pending, and others can't book your dates. We'll also send you notifications—like emails, SMS, and push reminders depending on your preferences—to help you finish before the deadline. If you don't complete the process in this timeline, your reservation won't be confirmed.

Know that you may be required to re-verify your identity if you edit your legal name in your Account , make other updates to your account information, or for other reasons, like when we detect risk.

If you're asked to go through identity verification again, we may be able to re-verify your identity instantly using information you've already provided us, such as your name and contact details—or you might be asked to complete other verification steps. When this happens, any existing trips you've booked won't be affected, but you won't be able to make a new reservation until we verify that change.

Note: If you're trying to make a reservation, it's critical to submit the information we need as soon as possible. If your check-in starts within 12 hours, you'll have 1 hour to complete verification. Otherwise, you'll need to complete verification within 12 hours of making your reservation. Your reservation is pending during this time, and it will not be confirmed if you can't complete verification before the deadline we specify to you.

Hosts

If you're getting started as a host, you'll need to verify your identity when creating a listing for a stay, service, or experience for the first time, or if you've been invited to be a new co-host of a listing. While there's no time limit for hosts to complete verification, your listing won't be published until you finish. This means you can't accept reservations until after you've been identity verified. Similarly, as a new co-host on a listing, you'll need to finish verification before you can accept your invite.

As a host or co-host, know that you may also be required to re-verify your identity if you edit your legal name in your Account, make other updates to your account information, or for other reasons, like when we detect risk.

As a primary host, if you're required to go through identity verification again, your existing reservations won't be affected, but the calendar for any listings will be blocked until you complete the process. Co-hosts who are not primary hosts on a listing may be removed from listings if identity verification steps are not completed when required.

How long the process takes

After you submit your info, it typically takes us less than 1 hour to verify your identity. This may differ based on the country you live in and what info you provided.

Make sure the info you provide is valid, accurate and up to date. Otherwise, it could take us longer to verify you, or we might need to follow up and request additional info.

If you're a guest making a reservation—remember to complete verification by the deadline we provide you. During this time, your reservation is pending, and others can't book your dates. We'll also send you notifications—like emails, SMS, and push reminders—to help you finish before the deadline.

Tips if you're having trouble

Check your messages: You may have been sent additional information via text, email, or phone. If you think you missed a message from us, follow these instructions.

Use your first and last legal name: Make sure the legal name you provide matches that in public records or on your Government ID. If your legal name is different, such as after a marriage or gender affirmation, you can contact our Customer Support team to verify an alternative legal name with a government-issued document like a marriage license or court order. While you have to use a legal name for verification, you can add a preferred first name that shows to other guests and hosts instead.

Grant camera permission: The Airbnb app or your browser may need permission to access your camera. You can typically find instructions on how to provide these permissions to Airbnb by checking your browser or app settings. If you update these permissions and it's still not working, try refreshing our app or webpage.

Use high-quality photos: Take photos in a well-lit room, and check that the photos are clear, not obscured, and fit within the frames we designate during the process. For selfies, religious head coverings are welcome—but please make sure that we can see your eyes, nose, and mouth. Don't worry—your selfie won't be shown to other users on Airbnb or on your profile.

Take a picture of yourself in the moment: If you're asked to take a selfie, it must be taken of you at the moment of submission and not be a previous photo of you. Don't worry—this won't show on your profile or to other users on Airbnb.

Use an original ID that's not expired: Make sure the ID you provide is unexpired and an original—that means it's not a photocopy, PDF, or other digital copy. If the ID has two sides, such as a driving license or national identity card, submit photos of both the front and back. Note that you might also need to follow country-specific guidelines, depending on where you're located.

Where we display your identity verified badge

Once you've been verified, you'll get an Identity verified badge. Your verified badge is shown on Airbnb as a red badge with a checkmark next to your profile photo and your verified status is also shown with the Identity verified link on your profile. If you're a host, your verified badge and Identity verified link may also be shown in the host section of your listing. If you tap on the user's profile card or an Identity verified link, you can see the month and year when the user first completed the identity verification process on Airbnb. Know that some users may have temporarily lost their identity verified status or have been re-verified since that date.

If you're a host who operates as a large enterprise, you may have created multiple accounts to help manage all of your listings. In these cases, your connected host accounts may not always display an Identity verified badge even though the business operating the account has been verified.

Losing your identity verification badge

If you change your personal information, like your legal name, or remove your government ID from your account, you may lose your identity verified badge and need to verify again to book or host future guests.

Identity info your host can ask for

Airbnb doesn't share your government ID with a host when you book. However, your host may ask for a government ID after reservation if they added information about what is required and why in their listing description at the time you make a reservation—and only where required for legal or compliance reasons as outlined in Airbnb's off-platform policy .

Some regions have laws that require guests to register with local authorities. This can be done directly with the local authorities—or at the accommodation by the host on behalf of the authorities. In other words, if you've booked a stay in a region where this applies, a host of a bed & breakfast, hostel, hotel or other accommodation on Airbnb might request this registration from you.

How we share your data

We are a community built on trust. A fundamental part of earning that trust means being clear about how we use your information.

Only authorized Airbnb personnel and authorized third-party providers may access the information you submit, and all info is stored and transmitted in a secure manner. We share your identification information with authorized third-party service providers to help support the identity verification process—including such things as verifying your identity, authenticating your identification documents, and performing background checks (where permitted under applicable law).

How we manage your data

We retain images of your government ID and any selfies that are collected in the identity verification process, as required for legal compliance, litigation, legal and safety investigations and claims, security and/or law enforcement purposes.

Note: In many regions, including the European Union, the retention period for government IDs is three years from the date of receipt of the images and the retention period for selfies is the duration of your account, unless we are otherwise required to retain the images for a longer period, as described above.

After your ID has been deleted, we continue to retain some information from it – such as your date of birth – for the management of your account, legal compliance and general security purposes.

We handle the information collected during identity verification for purposes outlined in our Privacy Policy . Examples of the info we collect, and the purposes we may use them for are below.

Personal information you have provided us with, such as legal name, address and date of birth:

How to check if an Airbnb email, text, call, or website is authentic

People sometimes create fake emails, text messages, phone numbers, or websites designed to look like Airbnb. These can be used to try to steal personal information, like your account password or bank account info. This is often called phishing, vishing (if it's a phone call), or spoofing. Knowing what to look out for can help you to protect yourself.

Identify fraudulent emails, calls, texts, and websites

If you receive an email, text message, or are otherwise directed to a website that looks like Airbnb but asks for confidential information, like your account login or payment details, be cautious. When in doubt about the authenticity of a site, always start at the Airbnb home page. Type <https://www.airbnb.com> into your browser and go from there.

Fraudulent emails often include the Airbnb logo and a fake Airbnb address in the "From" line. They may also contain text taken from real Airbnb emails, such as a reservation confirmation message, payout confirmation, reservation reminder, or a request to update your profile. By making an email seem real, fraudsters hope to trick you into providing personal information.

Check for legitimate links

Fraudulent emails and messages can contain links to fake Airbnb web pages that try to steal your information. Don't click links in any email you're not sure about.

A real link to Airbnb will begin with <https://www.airbnb.com> or a country-specific URL, such as <https://www.airbnb.es/> (Spain), <https://www.airbnb.it/> (Italy), https://www.airbnb.at (Austria), or <https://www.airbnb.co.uk> (United Kingdom). If you click a link that takes you to a page that looks like Airbnb but doesn't start with this address, it's a fraudulent page and you should close it.

Confirm emails are from an official Airbnb domain

Fraudulent emails often come from domains that may appear similar, such as @bnb.com or @reservation-airbnb.com. But legitimate emails from Airbnb will only come from the following domains:

@airbnb.com

@support-email.airbnb.com

@supportmessaging.airbnb.com

@airbnb.zendesk.com

@customer-research@airbnb.com

@e.airbnb.com

@email-support.airbnb.com

@express.medallia.com

@ext.airbnb.com

@guest.airbnb.com

@host.airbnb.com

@noreply@customer-research.airbnb.com

@noreply@qemailserver.com

@onboarding.airbnb.com

@outreach.airbnb.com

@research.airbnb.com

automated@airbnb.com

If it's not sent from one of these addresses, it's not from Airbnb.

Verify the website address

Pay special attention to any misspellings of Airbnb's name. If Airbnb is misspelled in the website address, the website is fake.

Identifying and reporting suspicious phone calls

You can always call us directly at 1-844-234-2500.

Fraudsters can disguise their real caller ID to make calls look like they're coming from a trusted or familiar number. This is why it's important to look out for spoof calls made to appear like they're coming from Airbnb, even if the caller ID references Airbnb or the phone number looks like it is from Airbnb support.

We will never call to ask you to change your payout method or share one-time codes, account passwords, or payment or payout details. If you receive a suspicious call from someone claiming to be from Airbnb, do not engage and hang up immediately. Instead, call us and report the caller's phone number, time of the call, and a brief description of what was said.

If you do have a support case open with Airbnb, that information should automatically show up for our support agents when you contact us .

When in doubt, to keep your info safe, it's always best to verify a call by getting in touch with us.

Be wary of urgency and threatening tones

Whatever communication method a bad actor might try to use, there are warning signs to look out for. Fraudulent emails, text messages, calls, and websites often have an urgent tone and threaten consequences, like account suspension, loss of a reservation or booking, or a delayed payment or payout, if you don't click a link or provide certain information immediately.

If you have any doubt about the authenticity of a communication you've received, do not engage with it and report it to us. To access your account to make a report, do not click on any links you've received – instead, separately navigate to the Airbnb website from your browser or use the app to log in and go from there.

Report fake websites to Airbnb

If you believe you've encountered a web page designed to look like Airbnb, let us know by reporting the website's URL at <https://www.airbnb.com/report-phishing> .

This page is just for reporting suspicious websites—it doesn't create an Airbnb support request or send you a confirmation.

What to do if you've interacted with a suspicious communication

If you've clicked a link, shared personal information, or engaged with a call or message you now suspect was fraudulent, it's important to take action right away.

You should contact us directly, so that we can help, including to support you with securing your account.

If you've shared any payment information, you should also contact your bank or other financial institution to let them know.

Fraudsters are often trying to find new ways to impersonate trusted companies. If something ever feels off, trust your instincts, don't engage, and contact us instead.

Create a strong password

When it comes to creating a safe password, the more symbols and numbers, the better. Here's how you can create a strong password that keeps your account secure. If you ever forget your password, you can always reset it .

Make your password unique

It's best to make your Airbnb password different from the passwords you use for other websites, like your email, bank account, or social media. That way, any security issues on those sites are less likely to impact your Airbnb account.

Do:

Use a mix of letters, numbers, and special characters (ex: #, $, !)

Replace some of the letters with numbers and symbols For example, instead of the password "BackToBackChamps" try using "B@ck2B@ckChamp$"

For example, instead of the password "BackToBackChamps" try using "B@ck2B@ckChamp$"

Don't:

Use common words

Use a combination of only words + digits (ex: dog1)

Tip: The longer your password is, the harder it may be to guess.

Use a password manager

If you find it tough to keep track of your passwords, try using a password manager. They're great for storing and organizing your passwords for each of your accounts online, so you don't have to remember them all.

Ground rules for home guests

We require everyone who is part of our community to stick to these simple rules for being a great guest when you stay at a home:

Treat your host's home like your own

Follow the host's standard house rules

Details of the ground rules

Treat your host's home like your own

Cleanliness: Guests should not leave the listing in a state that requires excessive or deep cleaning (moldy dishes, soiled carpets, stains from pets, etc.). Cleaning fees set by hosts are only meant to cover the cost of standard cleaning between reservations (laundry, vacuuming, etc.). Hosts may not charge guest fees for failing to perform specific cleaning or checkout tasks, but they may leave ratings and reviews based on cleanliness.

Litter: Guests should put their trash in designated trash receptacles and be mindful of excessive amounts of trash.

Damage: Where guests cause damage that is beyond normal wear and tear, we expect guests to inform hosts of the damage as soon as possible and work with the host to find a reasonable solution. Guests are expected to pay reasonable requests for reimbursement if they're responsible for damage, missing items, or unexpected cleaning costs. Learn more about getting charged for damage .

Follow the host's standard house rules

Approved guests: Guests should respect the approved number of guests and should ask their host if they're unsure about the rules for visitors. Disruptive gatherings are always prohibited. Learn more in our Community Disturbance Policy .

Check-in time: Guests should respect their host's check-in window and should not check in before or after the designated window without prior approval from the host.

Checkout time: Guests should complete checkout, including key return, by the designated checkout time indicated on the Airbnb reservation, and should not leave belongings at the listing past the designated checkout time for storage or later pickup without prior approval from the host.

Smoking: Guests should respect "no smoking" rules and should ask their host if they're unsure about the limitations. This includes the use of tobacco, cannabis, e-cigarettes, etc. Guests are responsible for compliance with applicable laws.

Approvals for pets: Guests should not bring any pets inside a listing that is designated as "no pets" in the house rules, bring more pets than are approved into a listing, or fail to inform the host about any pets brought inside the listing. Note that service animals are not considered pets. Learn more about our rules around service animals in our Accessibility Policy .

Noise: Guests should respect designated quiet hours and should not disturb the surrounding community with a disruptive level of noise (loud music, shouting, slamming doors, etc.).

Commercial film and photography: Guests should not participate in film or photography that is intended for commercial use or profit, without documented permission from the host.

Reporting a violation

Airbnb encourages hosts to promptly report violations of these ground rules. We accept reports directly from hosts who contact us, as well as from neighbors .

When a host is dealing with a suspected or actual violation of these ground rules, we ask that they:

Communicate with the guest—this is often the quickest path to resolution.

Document the issue through the Airbnb message thread, an emailed complaint from a neighbor, photos, etc.

Contact us to report any issues, or request payment for damages through the Resolution Center .

Leave an honest review with feedback so that the guest can improve for future hosts.

Holding guests to these ground rules

We are committed to enforcing these ground rules. Actions we take may include providing information to guests about the policy and issuing warnings. When repeated or severe violations of these ground rules are reported, guests may also be suspended or removed from our community.

In addition to standard house rules covered in these ground rules, hosts can also add a written set of additional rules to their listing page. If a guest violates any of these additional rules, hosts can reach out to customer support to help with the appropriate next steps.

Communicate promptly with the host if issues come up

In addition to the above ground rules, good communication between hosts and guests is important for successful stays. When guests are able to (not out of cell phone range, etc.), Airbnb encourages guests to be responsive when a host reaches out to resolve an issue.

Appealing violations

Guests may appeal decisions under this policy by contacting customer support or through the link we provide to start the appeals process. In reviewing appeals, we will consider any additional details the guest provides, such as new or corrected information, violations of our Reviews Policy , or other relevant circumstances related to the violation(s).

Community Disturbance Policy

We respect local communities and we expect the same of our hosts and guests. That is why we do not allow open-invite parties, disruptive gatherings, or other community disturbances during an Airbnb reservation.

What's not allowed

We ask our entire Airbnb community to work together to help prevent community disturbances. This includes following our policy, which does not allow:

Disruptive gatherings and other community disturbances, regardless of size. Signs of disruption to the local community can include: Excessive noise Excessive trash Trespassing Smoking nuisances Parking nuisances Neighborhood vandalism Serious injuries or reckless behavior

Reducing community disturbances

To help promote safe and responsible travel on Airbnb, we take steps to address community disturbances. For example, we may block certain reservations that we determine to be a higher risk for disruptive gatherings or take action on a user's account, which can include account removal. See how Airbnb screens for potential disruptive gathering risk .

Enforcing this policy

If we determine that any community member violated this policy, we take appropriate action. This can include educating users, issuing warnings, suspending or removing listings, or suspending or removing the violating accounts.

Lesser disturbances may result in warnings, whereas repeated or more severe disturbances may result in account or listing suspension or removal.

In rare cases where a listing has severe or repeated issues, such as becoming a chronic disturbance within a neighborhood, we may suspend or remove it from Airbnb.

We're here to help

Members of the community can report a listing that they believe is causing a community disturbance by contacting our dedicated Neighborhood Support team.

If there's an emergency in progress, please contact local emergency services or law enforcement authorities for assistance. If you're unfamiliar with local emergency services phone numbers, you can use Airbnb to dial emergency services now .

Restrictions on security cameras and other devices in homes

We do not allow hosts to have security cameras or recording devices that monitor indoor spaces in homes, even if these devices are turned off. Hidden cameras have always been prohibited and will continue to be prohibited. Hosts are allowed to have exterior security cameras, noise decibel monitors, and smart devices in homes as long as they comply with the below guidelines and applicable laws.

These rules took effect on April 30, 2024.

Security cameras and recording devices

Security cameras and recording devices are any device that records or transmits video, images, or audio such as a baby monitor, or doorbell camera.

Hidden security cameras are strictly prohibited.

Hosts are not allowed to have security cameras and recording devices that monitor any part of a home's interior, such as the hallway, bedroom, bathroom, living room, or guest house, even if they're turned off or disconnected. These prohibitions also apply to the common areas and shared spaces of private room listings (ex: a living room). For certain homes in Japan with a Hotel Business License, hosts may be required by applicable law to have a camera that monitors the home's interior entryway only. These cameras must be disclosed to guests, are not allowed to monitor any of the spaces outside of the entryway, and are prohibited from recording audio.

For certain homes in Japan with a Hotel Business License, hosts may be required by applicable law to have a camera that monitors the home's interior entryway only. These cameras must be disclosed to guests, are not allowed to monitor any of the spaces outside of the entryway, and are prohibited from recording audio.

Hosts are not allowed to place security cameras and recording devices over exterior areas to the home where users have a greater expectation of privacy, such as the inside of an enclosed outdoor shower or in a sauna.

Hosts are allowed to have exterior security cameras and recording devices, and are required to make sure their location is disclosed in the listing's description (ex: "I have a camera in my front yard," "I have a camera over my patio," "I have a camera over my pool" or "I have a doorbell camera monitoring my front door and the hallway of my apartment building.")

Home hosts are required to disclose exterior security cameras and recording devices under their control, such as the hallway of their apartment building or over their backyard.

Noise decibel monitors

Noise decibel monitors are devices that assess sound levels and their duration but do not record audio.

Home hosts are allowed to have noise decibel monitors in the home's interior as long as the host discloses their presence and they are not located in bedrooms, bathrooms, or sleeping areas. Hosts are not required to disclose where their noise decibel monitors are located.

Smart home devices

Smart home devices are devices that connect and interact with other devices or networks, such as Amazon's Alexa and Google's Nest.

Home hosts are allowed to have smart home devices.

Home hosts are encouraged, but not required, to disclose their presence in their listing. We also encourage hosts to give guests the option of unplugging or disabling smart devices.

When a neighbor reports an issue

It's important to keep in touch, so we encourage hosts and their neighbors to communicate directly with each other to resolve any issues that might come up during a stay. Here are a few pointers to help you avoid potential disagreements with a neighbor:

Before the reservation begins, confirm with your guests that they've read and agreed to your house rules

In your house rules , select No for Parties or Events

Update your listing description to clearly prohibit parties and events

Set a maximum number of guests for your space

Inform guests of appropriate parking locations

Print out your house rules and any building rules and display them at your space

Let neighbors know when guests will be there

Responsible hosting in the United States

We encourage hosts to think carefully about their responsibilities. Hosting offers rich experiences, but it comes with a certain level of commitment. In addition to the basic requirements that we expect of all hosts, here are some ways you can be a responsible host.*

Health and cleanliness

Global information about Airbnb's 5-step enhanced cleaning process can be found in general info about hosting places to stay .

Key recommendations on cleaning

Recommendations on waiting to enter the space before cleaning and disinfection from the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)

Safety

Emergency procedures

Indicate local emergency numbers and the nearest hospital. Provide a clear emergency contact number for yourself, as well as backup, for easy guest reference. Also make clear how you should be contacted if the guest has questions or issues arise.

Make a first aid kit easily available.

Ensure you have a functioning smoke alarm and carbon monoxide detector, and that your property meets government safety guidelines for your area (ex: International Building Code). Ensure you provide a functioning fire extinguisher and complete required maintenance.

Ensure you have a clearly marked fire escape route, and post a map in your home.

Minimize hazards

Establish safe occupancy limits—your local government may have guidelines.

Go through your home to identify any areas where guests might trip or fall and either remove the hazard or mark clearly. Fix any exposed wires. Ensure stairs are safe and have railings. Remove or lock up any objects that may be dangerous to your guests.

Ensure your home is safe for children, or else notify guests of potential hazards.

Ensure your home is properly ventilated and that temperature control is clearly marked and functional. Ensure guests are clear about how to safely use the heater.

Privacy

Always be mindful of your guests' privacy. Fully disclose whether there are security cameras, recording devices, or noise decibel monitors at your listing. Note that we do not allow security cameras or other recording devices inside of a listing. Make sure you are aware of and comply with applicable laws. Learn more about our approach to security cameras and recording devices .

Neighbors

How can I be mindful of my neighbors?

Building rules

Ensure you relay your building's common area rules to your guests. You may want to even notify your neighbors that you will have guests, and remind guests not to bother your neighbors (ex: don't knock on their door or buzz them to let you in).

Smoking

If you don't allow smoking, we suggest posting signs to remind guests. If you do allow smoking, ensure you have ashtrays available in designated areas.

Parking

Ensure you relay parking rules for your building and neighborhood to your guests.

Noise

Remind guests about keeping noise down. Develop a policy about guests inviting other people over, and ensure your guests are clear about quiet hours. Disruptive gatherings and other community disturbances are not allowed.

Pets

If you allow pets, ensure guests are educated about things like local parks and local customs (ex: cleaning up after your dog). Have a backup plan in case a guest's pet upsets the neighbors (such as the number of a nearby pet hotel).

House Rules

To avoid surprises, you may want to include the information covered above in your House Rules in your Airbnb listing profile.

Permissions

Whom should I notify that I'm hosting on Airbnb?

Contracts

Check your HOA or Co-Op Board regulations to make sure there is no prohibition against subletting—or any other restriction against hosting. Read your lease agreement and check with your landlord if applicable. You may consider adding a rider to your contract that addresses the concerns of these parties and outlines the responsibilities and liabilities of all parties.

Roommates

If you have roommates, consider a roommate agreement in writing which outlines things like how often you plan to host, how you'll ensure guests follow House Rules, and even whether you'll share revenue if that makes sense for you.

Neighbors

Consider whether you should notify your neighbors about your plans to host, along with your plan for how to make sure your guests are not disruptive.

Subsidized housing

If you live in public or subsidized housing there may be special rules that apply to you. The manager of the property may be able to answer questions about this.

General regulations

What local regulations apply to me?

Taxes

Ensure you look up any local taxes or business license requirements that may apply. This may include things like hotel/transient occupancy tax, sales, and other taxes such as Value Added Tax (VAT) or Goods and Services Tax (GST), or income tax.

Permits or registrations

Ensure you look up any permitting, zoning, safety, and health regulations that may apply. The governing authorities that regulate the use and development of property in your area may have useful information on such regulations.

Rent control/rent stabilization

If you live in rent controlled or stabilized housing, there may be special rules that apply to you. Contact your local Rent board to ask questions about this topic.

Important things to check

Taxes

Taxes can be complicated, and you should take time to understand the rules as they apply to you and your particular situation.

Ernst and Young has prepared an overview of tax considerations for Airbnb Hosts relating to the US taxation of rental income: Ernst and Young's United States "General guidance on the taxation of rental income" (English) . This information provides an overview of how to complete your tax return as well as some of your tax responsibilities regarding the revenue you derived from your hosting activity on Airbnb and other hosting platforms. The information provided by Ernst and Young relates exclusively to US income tax and does not include any guidance relating to occupancy taxes, hotel taxes, value added taxes, or other taxes.

Disclaimer: Airbnb's presentation of Ernst and Young is not an endorsement. Tax advice is complicated and you should do your own diligence when receiving advice. Airbnb is not responsible for any tax or other advice provided by any outside entity.

Insurance

Work with your insurance agent or carrier to determine what kind of obligations, limits, and coverage are required for your specific circumstances.

Host damage protection and Host liability insurance

AirCover for Hosts includes Host damage protection and Host liability insurance , which provide you with basic coverage for listed damages and liabilities. However, these don't take the place of homeowner's insurance, renter's insurance, or adequate liability coverage. You might need to meet other insurance requirements as well.

We strongly encourage all Hosts to review and understand the terms of their insurance policy coverage. Not all insurance plans will cover damage or loss of property caused by a guest who books your accommodation.

Learn more about AirCover for Hosts .

Liability and basic coverage

Review your homeowner's or renter's policy with your insurance agent or carrier to make sure your listing has adequate liability coverage and property protection.

Change the dates of your home reservation

If you need to change the dates of a confirmed home reservation, you can submit a trip change request to your host. Once you send the request, your host will receive a notification to approve or decline your request. Please note that only the person who made the original reservation may submit a trip change request or accept one proposed by the host.

Changing your reservation dates

Changing your reservation dates on desktop

Click Trips and select the trip you want to change

Under Reservation details , click Change reservation

Change the dates of your stay and click Save

Review your changes and then click Send request

How the cost of your reservation may be affected by a trip change request

Modifying the dates of your reservation may alter the total cost of your trip, depending on your host's pricing.

Before submitting your trip change request, you'll be shown both the original and the new total cost. Any necessary adjustments—either a charge or a refund—will be processed if the cost changes.

If the cost of your trip increases:

In most cases, the additional amount will be charged to your original payment method as soon as the host accepts the request.

For some payment methods, guests will have up to 48 hours to submit the additional payment after the host accepts.

If the cost of your trip decreases:

You'll receive a refund to the payment method used when you booked the home reservation.

You can find out when you'll get your refund .

How pre-approvals may be affected by a trip change request

If you booked using a pre-approval that your host sent, any change to the home reservation means that the price of the reservation will be recalculated as if it were a new booking.

Your host may be willing to offer you the same price as your original booking. Just message them to ask. If they agree, they can send you a trip change request with a new price.

Extending your Instant Book reservation

If you booked with Instant Book, you may be able to add extra nights to your reservation and get instant confirmation —no need to wait for your host to approve.

When instant extension is available, you'll see the updated price—including any additional nightly rates and fees—before you confirm.

You can only extend your reservation this way at least 72 hours before your scheduled checkout time.

How tax calculations may be affected by a trip change request

When a trip change request is accepted, the taxes for a home reservation are always recalculated to apply the most recent and accurate tax requirements for the home's location.

If your host declines your trip change request or doesn't respond

If the host declines your trip change request, or doesn't respond, your reservation will stay the same.

If your trip has already ended before you can make your trip change request

You can't make changes if your checkout has already passed. But you can always book a new stay with the host.

If your reservation is a hotel stay and you want to make a trip change request

If you're within the free cancellation window, you can cancel your reservation and rebook, so long as the hotel has availability.

If you're outside the free cancellation window, you can contact the hotel directly to ask if they'll offer you a refund so you can rebook. Or you can contact us, and we'll request a refund from the hotel on your behalf.

Please be aware that any changes or a refund may not be possible as they're strictly at the hotel's sole discretion. Tip: Calling your hotel can lead to a quicker response.

If you need to make additional changes to your trip

Once you've submitted a trip change request, any later changes must go through the process again as a new request.

If your host hasn't responded to the request and you no longer want to make changes, you can always withdraw your trip change request.

How to make a trip change request to monthly stays

If a reservation is for 28 nights or more, the monthly stays cancellation policy applies. When a trip change request is submitted for a monthly stay, the change may happen automatically without requiring approval if:

It's before the trip and the reservation is still 28 nights or longer

The trip has started, but it's 30 nights or more until the checkout date

If a monthly stay is shortened to a length of 27 nights or less (shorter stay), you'll be responsible for the following 30 days of payment from the day of the alteration, or until the end of the reservation if less than 30 days remain.

Once a home reservation is altered from a monthly stay to 27 nights or less (shorter stay), the host's standard cancellation policy will apply to future alterations or cancellations made to the updated reservation.

How to change a home reservation during a trip

If your trip has already started and you want to change the length of your home reservation, you can submit a change request to your host. However, there are a few things to bear in mind before you do:

You can change the number of guests after check-in, if agreed upon with the host.

Any additional payments can be made through the Resolution Center .

The cancellation policy will remain the same as the originally booked policy for short-term reservations.

If you've booked additional services or experiences for your stay, make sure their scheduling aligns with the revised length of your home reservation.

Reservation changes are limited to a maximum of 3 per day or 10 in total for a single reservation. If you exceed this number of changes, you may need to contact us for assistance.

Keep in mind: Your guest can choose to decline the trip change request. If they decline and you can't accommodate their current stay, you'll need to cancel their reservation .

If your guest accepts the trip change request

If they accept, it will be updated with your new details. If the price changes, they'll be charged or refunded, as necessary.

In most cases, the guest's original payment method will be charged automatically. For some payment methods, the guest will be asked to submit payment within 48 hours. If their payment isn't submitted successfully, the change will be automatically declined and the reservation will revert to its original state.

If your guest has an Instant Book reservation

If a guest booked using Instant Book, they may have the option to add extra nights and get instant confirmation without needing to send you a trip change request. Guests can extend their reservation up to 72 hours before their scheduled checkout time. You'll receive an immediate notification if an extension is confirmed.

Need to make an additional change? Message your guest or send them a trip change request .

How pricing works for trip change requests

If you're modifying the reservation dates, the pricing of the original reservation may change. Any changes to the number of guests apply to the entire reservation, and may cause an increase or decrease in the price of the original reservation, depending on the extra guest fee settings at the time of booking.

The original total and the new total will be shown to guests before they accept your trip change request. If the cost of their trip changes and they agree to the change, they'll be charged or refunded, if necessary.

How changing the length of a trip may affect the cancellation policy

If a stay of 27 nights or less is altered, but it remains a shorter stay, your standard cancellation policy will still apply to future alterations or cancellations made to the updated reservation.

If a reservation is changed from a monthly stay to 27 nights or less (shorter stay), the standard cancellation policy you've chosen for your listing will apply to future alterations or cancellations made to the updated reservation.

If the length of a reservation is changed and a stay that was 27 nights or less becomes a monthly stay of 28 nights or more, the long-term cancellation policy that you've chosen for your listing will apply to future alterations or cancellations made to the updated reservation.

If a monthly stay is altered, but it remains 28 nights or more, your long-term cancellation policy will still apply to the reservation, regardless of any date changes that result from a trip change request.

If the listing your guest booked isn't available

In rare, unavoidable situations, it may be appropriate to offer a guest a different listing after their reservation is confirmed. Find out more about what should be done if you need to propose an alternative listing as an option before canceling .

How weekly or monthly discounts may be affected by a trip change request

Changing the length of a reservation may affect whether or not your guest is still eligible for a weekly or monthly discounted rate.

How pre-approvals may be affected by a trip change request

If your guest booked with a pre-approval that you sent, any changes to the reservation will mean that the pricing will be recalculated as if it were a new booking.

You can still offer your guest the same price as their original pre-approval—you can modify the price, along with the reservation dates, in the same trip change request. Just be sure to communicate all of this with them.

How tax calculations may be affected by a trip change request

When a trip change request is accepted, the taxes for a reservation are always recalculated to apply the most recent and accurate tax requirements for the listing location.

If the guest's reservation has already ended

You can't make changes if the guest's checkout has already passed. If you need to handle money-related requests, you can send your guest money or request a payment from them in the Resolution Center .

Only one trip change request for a reservation at a time

Keep in mind that you can only send one change request for a reservation at a time. Once changes have been made, any later changes must go through the process again as a new request.

Reservation change limits

Reservation changes are limited to a maximum of 3 per day or 10 in total for a single reservation. If you exceed this number of changes, you may need to contact us for assistance.

If you need to edit your trip change request

Made a mistake? You can't modify a trip change request after sending it, but you're able to cancel it and send a new one.

Monthly stays

If a reservation is for 28 nights or more, the long-term cancellation policy applies . When a trip change request is submitted for a monthly stay, the change may happen automatically without requiring approval if:

It's before the trip and the reservation is still 28 nights or longer

The trip has started, but it's 30 nights or more until the checkout date

If a monthly stay is shortened to a length of 27 nights or less (shorter stay), the guest is responsible for the following 30 days of payment from the day of the alteration, or until the end of the reservation if less than 30 days remain.

Once a reservation is altered from a monthly stay to 27 nights or less (shorter stay), the standard cancellation policy you have chosen will apply to future alterations or cancellations made to the updated reservation.

Responding to a guest's trip change request

Sometimes, guests need a little flexibility. If they want to alter a confirmed reservation (ex: add or subtract nights, choose different dates, add or remove guests), they should send you a trip change request.

Accept or decline a trip change request

Open your messages with your guest and find Show details . If you accept the changes, they'll be applied automatically, and your guest will be charged or refunded if necessary.

If their proposed changes don't work, you can decline the request. If you're able to accommodate them with different changes, you can message them to ask or send them a trip change request .

Don't change or cancel reservations on behalf of guests

If you make the changes to your guest's reservation, you might jeopardize your good standing as a host. Instead, let them know that they can do it themselves. Guests can also modify their trip reservation via the link in their confirmation email.

How long you have to respond to a trip change request

While there isn't a time limit, responding to trip change requests quickly can help you avoid canceled reservations .

When guests can send a trip change request

Guests can send trip change requests once a home reservation is confirmed, and any time before checkout—even during their stay

If you can't accommodate the trip change request

You can always decline a trip change request with no consequences.

If you can't make a guest's trip change work, just let them know. It helps to give a clear reason, such as having other plans that conflict with the requested dates.

Changing your payout method when you have an unpaid Airbnb balance

If you use the same method for Airbnb payments and payouts—such as your bank account—you can't change it as a payout method if you have an unpaid balance owed to Airbnb.

Why you can't change your payout method if you have a payout adjustment pending

If you owe any amount of money to Airbnb—such as for a host cancellation or reservation change—and there will be an adjustment made to your future payout(s), you won't be able to change or remove the payout method until the adjustment is complete.

You might be shown an error like, "Sorry, something went wrong. Please try again later." when trying to update your payout method.

Airbnb collects adjustments through the payout method on file. If you switch methods, we can't process the payment, so changes are blocked until the balance is settled. Once that's done, you'll be able to make changes to your payout method.

When the adjustment will be completed

You can update your payout method once the adjustment is deducted from your next scheduled payout(s). Find out how to check the status of an adjustment .

Getting paid as a new host

Congrats! You've earned it (literally). Now, when will you receive your payment? Here's essential information on how your payouts work—from setting up payout methods to when and how you'll get your payouts.

Set up a payout method to get paid

Whether you're a new home, service, or experience host, you'll need to set up a payout method on your account to get paid. We recommend doing this as soon as possible, as it may take a little while to be fully activated.

Deactivating or deleting your account

We'd hate to see you go, but if you've decided to leave Airbnb, you have a couple of options. You can temporarily deactivate your account, which allows you to reactivate it later, or you can permanently delete it.

What happens when you deactivate your account

If you're a host, you also have the option to deactivate a listing without deactivating your entire account.

If you're still thinking about deactivating your account, here's what happens:

Your profile will be hidden

Your listings will be hidden if you're a host

Some information, like your reviews, may remain visible to others

Airbnb will retain your account data so you can reactive in the future

To reactivate your account, please contact us by phone .

Before deactivating your account, make sure to resolve:

Any upcoming reservations

Open issues from Airbnb Customer Support or the Resolution Center

Requests for personal data

To deactivate your account

Deactivate your account on desktop

Click Menu > Account settings > Login & security

Under Account , click Deactivate

Choose a reason for deactivating your account, then click Continue

Click Deactivate account

How account deletion works

When you permanently close and delete your account:

We'll verify your identity for security purposes before accepting the request

Once your request is processed, your personal information will be permanently deleted, except for certain information that we're legally required or permitted to retain, as outlined in our Privacy Policy

Once your account is deleted, you can't reactivate it, recover any data, or regain access. You'll need to set up a new account if you want to use Airbnb again. Learn more about exercising your data subject rights .

To delete your account

Delete your account on desktop

Protecting your privacy

At Airbnb, we want to create a world where anyone can belong anywhere and the first step is creating a community that's open, inclusive, and built on trust. A fundamental part of earning this trust is protecting your privacy.

Digital spaces

Privacy principles: Our commitment to data privacy is explained in our privacy principles . These principles guide our decision making as we work to uphold your trust. We use data to power your experiences, and we don't sell your personal data to anyone. You can learn more about our privacy policy and how to exercise your data subject rights .

Non-consensual content sharing: Private information, photos, or videos of community members must not be publicly posted unless the subject of the post has given their permission.

Physical spaces

We've put in place strong policies and practices that require our community members to respect your privacy in physical spaces.

Security cameras and recording devices: Hosts must not have security cameras or recording devices that monitor indoor spaces in homes, even if these devices are turned off. Learn more about our approach to security cameras and recording devices .

Physical intrusions: Hosts and guests must not enter private spaces unless they have permission or there is an emergency. For entire home stays, hosts must clearly identify any private, off-limits areas in the listing details and guests are expected to respect those private areas. Guests have a reasonable expectation of privacy in the space they have rented. Hosts must obtain guest permission before accessing the listing or property during the reservation, unless there is an emergency. For shared stays, hosts and guests must not enter a shared bathroom when another person is inside, and must obtain permission before entering non-shared spaces like bedrooms and private bathrooms.

Use of another's personal property: Hosts and guests must not use the personal property of another unless they are given permission to do so, and may use property only as allowed if permission is given.

Enforcing these policies

If we determine that any community member violated our policies, we take appropriate action, including issuing warnings, suspending or removing listings, or suspending or removing an account from the Airbnb platform – depending on the severity of the conduct.

We're here to help

We're here to support the Airbnb Community. If you witness or experience behavior that goes against our policies, please let us know .

Make a reservation for someone else

Need to make a reservation for someone else? You can book a home for someone else, even if you're not joining the trip. This is useful if you're an assistant or family member looking to book for another individual. If you're part of an organization looking to support someone with their trip, you can book for them using Airbnb for Work .

Requesting permissions to book for someone else

Booking permissions let guests authorize a trusted person to book, pay, and help manage trips. If a guest gives a booker permissions to book for them, a booker will only see reservations they book for that guest—not their other trips.

Before sending a request to book for someone else, you may need to verify your identity, confirm your phone number, and add a profile photo; then enter the guest's email and we'll email them to log in (or create an account) and accept your request. Learn more about requesting and accepting permissions to book for someone else .

Book a reservation for someone else

Booking a reservation for someone else on desktop

Once the guest accepts the invitation, click the listing you want to reserve

Select dates, number of guests, then click Reserve

On the checkout page, go to Who you're booking for

Select the name of the guest you have permission to book for

Click Confirm and pay

When you confirm a reservation for someone else, the reservation is charged to your payment method .

If you currently use Airbnb for Work, you'll need to follow these additional instructions .

Managing your reservation after booking

Booker : Can view reservation details, message with the group, request changes, invite other guests, or cancel.

Guest : Can view reservation details, message with the group, invite other guests, leave reviews, and cancel the reservation if needed. They can also send or request money via the Resolution Center .
Guests are unable to submit alteration requests.

How reviews work

Who can leave the review: Only the guest who stayed at the listing can leave a review , and only the host can review the guest .

Guests and hosts each have 14 days after checkout to write a review.

Property-damage scenarios

Accidents are rare, but in the event that damage occurs during your stay, your host can send you a reimbursement request to cover the cost of the damage. A primary guest, not a booker, is responsible for covering costs.

Contacting Airbnb Support

All roles can reach Airbnb Support during and after the trip. Tap Help in the app or Contact us .

Inviting other guests to a reservation

If the reservation is for multiple guests, both the booker and guest will be able to invite others to join the reservation .

After confirming the reservation, the booker, guest, and other confirmed guests will be able to access the reservation details, view each other's profiles, and send messages to the group. All of the guests will also remain connected on Airbnb after the reservation ends . The booker will not be added as a Connection to any of the guests on Airbnb.

How to book if you currently use Airbnb for Work

If you want to book a trip associated with your organization or company, keep using Airbnb for Work as you already do today. Learn more about booking and managing Airbnb for Work trips.

Booking non-work travel

If you want to book a reservation for someone else outside of the Airbnb for Business program, you'll need to temporarily turn off Travel for work features. First, visit Travel for work in your Account , then turn on the toggle next to Try out the new way to book for someone else .how

What to know as a host

As a host, you can learn about the guests who will arrive on the Upcoming cards in Hosting .

To find out who booked the trip, tap the reservation card to open Reservation details —both the guest and the booker are listed there.

You'll also see the booker's name in the host confirmation email you received when the reservation was made.

While the booker isn't part of the stay, they can:

Message you on behalf of the group

Request trip changes (dates, number of guests, etc.)

When you send an alteration request, the booker is the one who need to approve it, not the guest

Confirm that guests can find your listing

There are millions of listings on Airbnb, and yours deserves to shine just as much as the rest. How can you tell if people are finding it?

Check your listing's views

You can confirm if your listing is showing up in search results by checking the number of views your listing has.

Check listing views on desktop

Click Today and click Menu

Click Insights

Click Views

On desktop or mobile browser, you can also find similar listings to compare with other listings in your market.

Search for your listing

Put on your travel hat and think like a guest! Search for a stay to find out how your listing appears in search results.

Keep in mind that each guest gets different results, based on their search filters , booking history, and other criteria. If there are a lot of properties in your area, you may need to add a few filters to find your place. And remember, locations are approximate—people only find out exactly where a property is after their reservation is confirmed .

If your listing is not showing up

Can't find your listing? Here are some things to check:

Is it a new listing? Listings are usually visible within 24 hours, but it may take up to 72 hours for some listings to show up in search results.

Are the dates on your calendar blocked? Check if the dates on your calendar are open. If they're blocked for the dates you searched, your listing won't show up. Find out more about why your calendar might be blocked .

How search results work

Wondering how Airbnb search results work? You've come to the right place. Airbnb uses an algorithm to generate search results that appeal to guests. The algorithm sorts through the millions of listings on Airbnb to find the right listings for each search. Guests enter search criteria and the algorithm returns listings that reflect those criteria.

Factors that influence search results

The algorithm considers many factors to determine how to order search results, but some factors have a larger impact than others. In particular, the quality, popularity, price, and, for homes, location of a listing heavily influence how a listing appears in search results. The algorithm also encourages variety within search results—so that guests are presented with listings that have different hosts, different characteristics, and a range of prices.

Quality. The algorithm assesses many characteristics to evaluate listing and trip quality, including the listing content like photos and videos, ratings and reviews from guests, communications between hosts and guests on the platform, and listing characteristics. The algorithm also considers customer service and cancellation information and amenities for homes. Higher quality listings with better ratings and reviews tend to rank higher in search.

Popularity. The algorithm evaluates the popularity of a listing using a wide range of information, including how guests engage with the listing. Examples of guest engagement with a listing include how often guests save a listing to their wishlist , how often guests book, and how often guests message the host. More popular listings tend to rank higher in search.

Price. To determine how attractive the price of a listing is, the algorithm considers a variety of price data, including total price and how that price compares to other listings in the area for the given dates. Listings that are priced below other comparable listings in the area with similar characteristics, such as guest capacity and amenities for homes, tend to rank higher in search.

Location. The location of a stay has a large impact on how the listing appears in search results. Listings located in places that guests like to stay tend to rank higher, like accommodations close to popular landmarks.

Using search filters and settings

We offer a variety of search filters and other settings that guests can use to adjust their search results. For example, guests can filter homes by the type of place, price range, amenities, booking options, and accessibility features, while experiences and services can be filtered by type. We also offer guests the ability to find homes search results on a map. To help guests understand the geographic distribution of homes that meet their search criteria, the listings that appear on the map may differ from those that appear in the list. Guests also have the option to browse grouped listings, such as homes near popular landmarks, experiences happening soon, and popular services.

How Hosts influence search results

Availability: The more dates a listing is available, the more likely it is compatible with a guest's plans—so adding availability may improve the visibility of a listing. Similarly, for homes, the more flexibility a host offers around how long guests can stay, the more likely the listing will work with the guest's plans and show up in search results.

Pricing: Because price has a large impact on search results, one of the ways hosts can most directly affect the performance of their listing in search is by adjusting their price or offering discounts . For example, many hosts offer lower prices or discounts to attract guests to newer listings or during less busy travel seasons.

Great media : High-quality listing photos and videos help attract guests' attention and improve engagement, which can improve ranking. A comprehensive listing description helps guests evaluate the listing and develop the confidence to book. Some guests are looking for specific amenities or listing characteristics in homes, like a crib, hot tub, step-free entrance, or a listing that allows pets. Adding sought-after amenities or characteristics to a listing can make the listing more attractive to guests and improve visibility in searches for listings with those amenities or characteristics.

Hospitality and settings: Host behavior and the settings they use also influence ranking. Hosts who deliver outstanding hospitality generally improve the performance of their listings over time. For example, for homes the algorithm considers the Superhost criteria —the number of cancellations by a host, the responsiveness of the host, and ratings and reviews for a listing—when ordering search results. For listings that are not instantly bookable, the algorithm considers how quickly hosts respond to guest inquiries and how often hosts reject requests to book. This means that listings that can be booked instantly may rank higher in search results because responses are automatic and the booking is confirmed without the host needing to affirmatively accept the request.

How guests influence search results

Guests can shape their search results by entering information like a location, dates, and the number of guests and pets. Guests can also find specific types of listings and use filters or the map to refine their search results. If there aren't enough high quality listings available that match a guest's search criteria, we may show other listings that we think might appeal to the guest, even if they do not meet all of the guest's criteria.

We also use information we have about a guest to personalize their user experience based on their interactions with the Airbnb Platform, like suggesting listings, destinations or categories they might like and determine and rank their search results. For example, if a guest's past bookings share certain characteristics, the algorithm may rank listings with those characteristics higher for that guest. Similarly, if a guest has a home reservation, the algorithm may rank higher experiences and services that are available nearby during the dates of that reservation.

How search works for recently activated listings

To help hosts get started, the algorithm is designed to make sure new listings show up well in search results. New listings usually show up in search results within 24 hours, but in some cases they may take longer.

Note : Our ranking algorithms will evolve over time to reflect changes to our business and technology, in our community, and around the world. Find out which factors impact search and how to improve your ranking in the Resource Center .
